THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION.

VOL. XXII | ATLANTA, GA., FRIDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 26, 1890. | PRICE FIVE CENTS.

ANOTHER SCANDAL BROUGHT TO LIGHT

IN THE REPUBLICAN RANKS TODAY.

A Postmaster Who Makes Money Out of His Office.

DRAWING REBATES FROM CONTRACTS

Colonel Candler Returns from Georgia

AND THEN TELLS WHAT HE KNOWS.

WASHINGTON, September 25.—[Special.]—Mr. Enloe, of Tennessee, sprung another sensation in the house today.

This time he exposes another rascally republican official, and has gotten the republican members of the house in a considerable stew.

The sensational resolution sets forth the fact that Mr. Wheat, the present republican postmaster of the house of representatives, contracted, when he assumed the duties of his office, with a Mr. Culberson for a certain number of delivery wagons with which to deliver the mail of the congressmen. The contract was bid for, and was given out at $5,000 per annum, which amount the house appropriated for that purpose. It further cites the fact that while Culberson receives that much, he returns to Mr. Wheat, as an individual, $150 a month out of the amount he receives, which sum Wheat has been putting into his own pocket.

THE STOLEN GOODS RETURNED.

When caught up with Wheat claimed that was one of the perquisites of the office, and was carried on by his predecessors. In order to escape he then returned to the clerk of the house the amount he has received from Culberson since he gave that gentleman the contract. In other words, Wheat simply made a deal with Culberson by which the latter was to pay him $150 a month for giving him (Culberson) a $5,000 government contract, or it was simply a conspiracy to rob the government, and now that he has been caught he returns the money to escape punishment. However, the Enloe resolution provides for an investigation, and while it was a bitter pill for the republicans to swallow, still they could not vote against it, and the resolution was passed as amended, however, to investigate the administration of the office by the last democratic postmaster.

A ROTTEN PARTY.

It seems that the republicans are becoming very unfortunate in their selection of men to fill the offices. First, they have a senator who has been denounced as a thief. They had a commissioner of pensions in Tanner who attempted to distribute all the surplus among his friends, for which he was deposed. His successor, Raum, used his office to boom his wildcat refrigerator concern and sold stock to the pension office clerks, promoting those who bought, and now the house postmaster has been pocketing a portion of the money he charges the government on his expense account. It all makes a pretty mess the republican party has made of things. But the strange part of it all is that the republicans are trying to shield the rascals they have put in office, who are robbing the government, and consequently the people. Wheat will be investigated very soon, and as soon as the elections are over he will probably be turned out of office.

COLONEL CANDLER TALKS.

Colonel Candler returned from Georgia this morning. He has been down to the ninth district taking a hand in the congressional race in the interest of the regular democratic nominee, Colonel Tom Winn. In speaking of the situation today he said:

"The race in the ninth will be very close, but Tom Winn will be elected. I have no fears whatever of the election of Pickett, but he is drawing largely from the democratic vote of the district, while he is taking nothing from the republicans. I fear Darnell more than Pickett. The division of the democratic vote is in his favor. Again, I fear that there are a large number of democrats in the district who will not vote at all, and all this makes it that much harder to elect Winn. However, we are making an active canvass of the district, and you will find that Winn will be elected, unless, at the last moment Pickett and Darnell combine, and one of them drops out. Even then, however, we would probably rally all the democrats and elect our man. However, I cannot say that Winn will have a walkover, but he will receive more votes than either of the other candidates, and will be elected."

"What about the race for the senate?"

"Everything on the surface looks like Gordon will be elected, but there is no way of telling what is beneath the surface. The alliance members will probably caucus just before the election of a senator, and if they have sufficient strength, then I think they will put up a candidate. If not they will vote for Gordon. If the alliance puts out a candidate I do not believe it will be Colonel Norwood. It will be a dark horse."

THE INTERCONTINENTAL RAILWAY.

The Intercontinental Railway Commission will meet here in October. This commission is to be composed of delegates from the United States, Mexico, Central and South America, and is to consider the advisability and practicability of the construction of a railroad connecting the United States with the Central and South American States. It is also authorized to have a survey made, and to report to the various governments interested. The commission is one of the results of the Pan-American congress. The various countries interested are to incur their shares of the expenses. Already the commissioners of all the countries except the United States have been appointed. The bill making an appropriation for the pay of commissioners and the survey has passed congress, and our commissioners will probably be appointed this week, as soon as Mr. Blaine returns to Washington.

THE TARIFF QUESTION.

The conferees on the tariff finished their work tonight, and tomorrow the bill will be reported to the house. It will immediately be laid before the house for action, and after debate for one or two days, will be passed in the exact form reported from the committee. The democrats will resort to no dilatory tactics. Instead, they will aid in hastening its passage, although they will vote solidly against the bill. It is a sectional measure of the most pronounced type, being formed to benefit the north and injure the south. Still the democrats have fought it in both houses when it was up originally, and now will simply record their votes against it, as there is no chance of defeating it at this time. The delay in reporting the bill was due to a failure to agree on the sugar and binding-twine schedules. It will cause adjournment to be delayed one day longer, and now congress is expected to adjourn about next Thursday.

ON HIS WAY HOME.

Judge Crisp will leave for home tomorrow night.

Col. John S. Candler, of Atlanta: I. H. Alexander, H. H. Alexander, of Augusta; Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Gilbert, Mrs. W. P. Pattillo and Miss Mary Pattillo, of Atlanta, are here

BOB KENNEDY AGAIN.

Although Bob Kennedy's speech, denouncing Quay as a criminal and a second Judas Iscariot, has been stricken from the permanent record, still that part of the speech in which Quay and the senate are denounced will be in the permanent record, incorporated in Mr. Enloe's remarks when he introduced the resolution to censure Kennedy. An effort was made by Quay's friends to have that stricken out also today, but, as it cannot be done without action by the house, it will probably remain.

E. W. B.

IN THE HOUSE.

Engaged in the Reading of Conference Reports.

WASHINGTON, September 25.—On motion of Mr. Lacey, of Iowa, a resolution was adopted directing the clerk of the house to forward to the governor of Arkansas, a copy of the resolution declaring that there was a vacancy in the second congressional district of that state.

The house then proceeded to the consideration of the conference report on the land forfeiture bill.

The conference report was adopted.

Mr. Grout, of Vermont, endeavored to secure an order setting aside tomorrow for the consideration of bills appertaining to the District of Columbia; but as Mr. Anderson, of Pennsylvania, objected unless the Atkinson bill was excluded, and Mr. O'Neill, of Pennsylvania, objected unless it was included, the proposition fell to the ground.

Mr. Hemphill presented the conference report on the bill for the establishment of Rock Creek park in the District of Columbia. There was some opposition to its adoption, and in advocating it, Mr. Hemphill remarked that the bill was substantially similar to that passed by the house. He thought that the report should be agreed to, as this was one of the first times in the history of the house that the senate had agreed to anything the house had done.

The report was agreed to—yeas, 123; nays, 65.

Conference reports was also agreed to upon bills granting a pension of $100 monthly to the widow of General Hartranft, and for the relief of settlers upon the Northern Pacific indemnity lands.

Mr. Payne, of New York, chairman of the special committee appointed to investigate the Silcott defalcation, called up the bill defining the duties of the sergeant-at-arms. It is in substance as follows:

It enables the sergeant-at-arms to make a requisition directly upon the treasury for the pay and mileage of members, and constitutes him, in explicit terms, a disbursing officer, limiting his compensation to his present salary. Under the present system members are required to give written receipts in advance of the actual payment of their salaries by the treasury. Under the law here proposed a receipt can only be required from a member when payment is actually made to him by the sergeant-at-arms. A bond of $50,000 is required of the sergeant-at-arms.

The bill was passed.

Mr. Boutelle, chairman of the committee on naval affairs, reported a bill appropriating $1,000,000 to enable the secretary of the navy to purchase nickel ore or nickel metal for the manufacture of nickel steel armor, and asked for unanimous consent for its consideration.

The bill was passed, and the house adjourned.

WILL BE REPORTED TODAY.

The Conferees on the Tariff Bill About Through With Their Work.

WASHINGTON, September 25.—At 1:45 o'clock the conferees on the tariff bill separated, after having been in session since 10 o'clock. Mr. Carlisle said that the report was not probable before tomorrow. Mr. Hiscock said that the situation was just as it had been—no agreement had been reached on sugar or binding twine. A settlement of the differences might be made at any moment, and there might not be an agreement at all. It can be stated with almost absolute certainty that the bill will be reported tomorrow morning, but upon what basis the expected agreement will be made is still unknown.

The iron and steel men have given up all hope of securing a change of rates on steel billets, which remain as fixed by the senate at 4-10 of a cent per pound when valued less than a cent a pound; 5-10 of a cent when valued at 1 cent a pound.

The republican conferees on the tariff bill have definitely decided to report the bill back to the house. The conference report will announce an agreement on each and every item in dispute between the two houses, and will not, as has been stated, be only a partial report. It will be presented to the house of representatives very soon after that body meets tomorrow morning, and there is a confident expectation entertained by the conferees that the report will be considered and disposed of before the house adjourns for the day, although there is a possibility that the vote on the adoption of the conference report may be delayed until the following day, through a desire of the members to make explanations of their views on matters with regard to which it has been necessary to make concessions.

All the republican members of the ways and means committee got together this evening and a decision to make a report and move its speedy adoption was determined upon.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP.

The Bond Purchases—A Public Building for Tampa, Etc.

WASHINGTON, September 25.—It appears from the report given out at the treasury department each day that nearly one-half of the interest due on or before July 1, 1891, on 4 per cents of 1907, and currency 6s has been prepaid under the circular of September 6th, and the public announcement of September 15th. Persons desiring to obtain prepayment on either of the above classes of bonds must present them to be stamped not later than Friday, October 10, 1890.

Mr. Lehlbach today reported favorably from the house committee on postoffices and post roads, the senate bill (with the appropriation reduced from $140,000 to $100,000) for a public building in Tampa, Fla.

A bill was today introduced in the house by Mr. Hopkins, of Illinois, to locate a branch mint of the United States at Chicago for the coinage of gold and silver.

JUDGE HASKELL MAY FIGHT TILLMAN.

A STARTLING REPUBLICAN SCHEME

To Nominate a Full Straightout Democratic Ticket

WITH JUDGE HASKELL IN THE LEAD

The Probability of Its Success Discussed.

THE TILLMAN PEOPLE ARE WORRIED.

CHARLESTON, S. C., September 25.—[Special.]—The Tillman ticket nominated by the democratic state convention September 10th, has by no means been elected as yet.

A bombshell was exploded today by the republican state executive committee, which threatened to put an entirely different phase on the matter.

THE TICKET SUGGESTED.

The committee was authorized by the state republican convention to put out a state ticket if they deemed it advisable.

It has transpired that the committee has agreed upon a ticket, the composition of which leaked out today. It is as follows:

Governor—A. C. Haskell.
Lieutenant Governor—John Bratton.
Secretary of State—J. Q. Marshall.
Treasurer—W. A. Ancrum.
Comptroller General—J. W. Barnwell.
Attorney General—J. H. Earle.
Adjutant General—M. L. Bonham.
Superintendent Education—J. H. Rice.

All the nominees are straightout democrats, who oppose the Tillman movement, and most of them opposed it on the stump.

THE REPUBLICAN CLAIMS.

The republicans claim that the ticket can be elected even without the aid of white votes.

There are 157,000 colored voters in the state against about 80,000 whites. Of the colored voters, they say over 110,000 are registered and qualified to vote for state officers, and they can poll 100,000 of these for this straightout democratic ticket. Besides this, they claim 20,000 democratic voters will join them in voting for this ticket, as against the Tillman ticket. Even if there should be no opposition, it is estimated that Tillman will not be able to poll more than 30,000 votes in the entire state.

THE DISCONTENT INCREASING.

Since the straightout democrats abandoned the fight against Tillman the discontent has been growing in the party, and the republicans count on these opponents of Tillman to see that there shall be a fair count. The Tillman leaders here are very much worried about it. One of them said today that if Judge Haskell allowed the negroes to vote for him there would be more negroes killed in November than were killed in 1876. The republicans say they don't care whether the men they nominate decline to serve or not, they will vote for them, and the straightout democrats may do as they please. All they are expected to do is to see a fair count of the ballots.

THE FARMERS AHEAD.

But Another Primary Will Be Necessary to Decide.

SPARTANBURG, S. C., September 25.—[Special.]—All the official returns in the congressional race are in, and there is no election. There would probably have been a farmers' candidate returned if the Tillmanites' vote had not been divided between so many. The vote was a light one on account of county complications, and the feeling that the real struggle was to come in the second race. The official returns tonight give the following totals for the district: Shell, 5,076; Duncan, 4,893; Mauldin, 782; McKissick, 561; Smith, 801. Shell represents the farmers' movement, and Duncan the straightout democracy. The final test will be made on November 7th. Smith and McKissick have both notified Major Duncan that he shall receive their support in the next race, and Mauldin will doubtless likewise throw his influence to him. The farmers, however, are very strong in the district, and can elect their man if they turn out in full force. But the contest will be very close. If another light vote like the present is cast, Duncan will be the man, but whoever wins will have a mighty small majority.

SENATOR VANCE TALKS.

He Characterizes Quay as a Condemned Criminal.

RALEIGH, N. C., September 25.—[Special.] There was today a large addition to the number of members of the democratic clubs here at the state convention. The event of the day was a speech by Senator Vance, which was one of his best, and which occupied over two hours. The senator was introduced by State Auditor Sanderlin, and his argument was mainly upon tariff questions. Many farmers' alliances were interested listeners and made numerous demonstrations of approval of Vance's powerful presentation of the oppression of the farming interests by the republican congress. He said protection was a sham, and that half of the New England factories were operated by foreigners, who are not even naturalized, and cannot speak English, but who do nothing save work for their employers and masters, and illustrate the beauties of protection. Vance spoke of the republican leaders, and referred to Chairman Quay as a condemned criminal, who had the good fortune to sit in the senate with honest and respectable men. At the conclusion of Vance's speech a barbecue was served, and Congressman Bunn made a speech.

The Republicans Despondent.

RICHMOND, Va., September 25.—[Special.]—The republican district committee made another unsuccessful attempt to have a meeting today to decide whether they will call a convention. Only two members were present, and they decided to issue another call for October 7th. Captain W. F. Wickham, of Hanover, has written to Colonel Normand Smith, of Henrico, stating that he will not be a candidate for congress. He says the republicans are hopelessly disrupted and disorganized in this district, with no leader and no chance of electing their candidate.

The Men Were Discharged.

OPELIKA, Ala., September 25.—[Special.]—Tuesday morning nearly all the colored hands engaged in the preliminary work on the flour mill struck, demanding $1 per day. Superintendent Dowdell promptly discharged them, and is rapidly filling their places.

BEATEN BACK BY BALFOUR'S BULLIES.

POLICEMEN ATTACK THE PEOPLE

And Drive Them Away from the Court

WHERE O'BRIEN IS BEING TRIED.

John Morley Assaulted and Harrigan Wounded.

THE POPULACE ARE GREATLY EXCITED.

DUBLIN, September 25.—Patrick O'Brien, who was arrested at Cardiff on Tuesday, was brought to this city yesterday, and placed in prison. The police refused to give any information as to when he would be taken to Tipperary for a hearing. But late last night the nationalists learned that he would be conveyed there by a morning train today, when they at once made preparations to give him a worthy escort. Much to the surprise of the authorities a large delegation of prominent nationalists boarded the train at the same time the officers appeared with O'Brien. Among these were John Morley, who has been in Ireland some time studying the Irish question; John Dillon, Alfred Illingworth, member of parliament for Bradford; T. M. Healy, Commoner, Harrington and several others. On the arrival of the train at Tipperary the nationalists started for the courthouse in a body. They had not gone far when they stopped at a street corner and entered into a conversation.

ATTACKED BY THE POLICE.

While standing in no way disturbing the police there, they were ordered by the police to move on. John O'Connor, member of parliament for South Tipperary, took very vigorous exception to this order and showed his contempt for the police by calling upon the crowd, which by that time had become large, to give three cheers for John Morley. The cheers were given with a hearty good will, much to the exasperation of the police, who thereupon charged upon the group and attempted to force it to move forward. In the melee that followed the policemen did not hesitate to use their batons.

One burly constable aimed a blow at John Morley himself, but John O'Connor, who stood near, warded it off. The nationalists then continued their way slowly towards the courthouse.

As this was the day fixed for the trial of the arrested nationalists, the streets of Tipperary were full to overflowing with people interested in the case. Nationalists had thronged to town from all adjacent parts, many of them carrying the national weapon, the shillalah, and prepared to use it if provocation would arise.

STILL ANOTHER ARREST.

Early in the day it became known that still another arrest had been made. The victim this time was Thomas J. Condon, member of parliament for Tipperary East. He was taken this morning at Limerick and also brought to Tipperary.

When the hour for the sitting of the court arrived, an immense crowd had collected before the courthouse, ready to rush in the moment the doors were thrown open. The authorities thereupon decided not to open the doors to the general public, but to admit only those who were immediately interested in the trial.

The crowd did not take kindly to this treatment, but pressed forward, trying to force a way into the courthouse. The police stoutly resisted, charging repeatedly upon the crowd, and using their clubs freely on whoever happened to be within reach. Many of their blows took effect, but the crowd did not yield instantly.

A REGULAR BATTLE.

For fully five minutes there was a stand-up fight between the now excited throng and the police.

At last, however, the crowd was gradually forced back, and the police succeeded in maintaining a clear space in front of the courthouse. The leaders of the crowd continued to make vigorous protests against being excluded from the courthouse, and the police were jeered at and taunted. Many people were hurt by the policemen's clubs. One man had his teeth knocked down his throat. Several required surgical attention.

TIMOTHY HARRINGTON INJURED.

Among the wounded were Timothy Harrington, member of parliament for Dublin, and Mr. Halifax. Both had their heads cut and came into the court with blood dripping over their coat collars and faces. Their appearance created a profound sensation, as Mr. O'Brien was at that moment denouncing the wanton clubbing of the populace, which he had just witnessed.

MORLEY APPEALS TO THE COURT.

Then John Morley arose and addressed the court, manifesting great agitation, both in tones and manner. He earnestly appealed to the court to protect the populace against the the wanton use of clubs by the police.

Meanwhile the nationalist leaders continued to protest against the exclusion of the general public from the courtroom. Both Morley and Dillon appealed to Colonel Caddell, presiding magistrate, to reverse his decision to keep the doors shut against the public. For some time he refused, but at last he yielded and ordered the doors thrown open. The room was at once filled to its utmost capacity, and all the proceedings were followed with intense interest.

At the outset Mr. Dillon objected to being tried before Resident Magistrate Shannon, upon the grounds that he had had a personal encounter with Shannon on one occasion at Cashel. At that time he asserts that Shannon had grossly insulted him. He urged, therefore, that there would be manifest impropriety in Shannon's sitting at the present trial.

SHANNON OVERRULES THE OBJECTIONS.

Judge Shannon refused to admit the validity of Mr. Dillon's objections. He know of no reason why he should not go on with the case. He declared that he would perform his duty without bias.

William O'Brien also objected to Shannon. The last time he saw Shannon, he said, Shannon was at the head of a body of police who were using their clubs upon the people. Moreover, Shannon had already tried him three times on similar charges. His sitting in the present case, Mr. O'Brien said, was an indecency and an insult. The magistrate answered O'Brien's objections in the same way that he had disposed of Dillon's.

Mr. Ronan, counsel for the crown, asked permission of the court to make some slight alteration in the charges against the prisoners. The latter protested vigorously against such permission, urging that it would be illegal. The court paid no heed to the protests, but permitted counsel for the crown to make the desired changes.

THE PROSECUTION OPENS.

Ronan then proceeded to open the case for the prosecution. He reviewed the circumstances which had led to the arrest of the nationalists back to the time when the plan of campaign was put in force on the Smith-Barry estate at Tipperary. That happened in May, 1880, and he proposed to present evidence to prove conspiracy on the part of the defendants from that time down to the time when the arrests were made. During all that period he proposed to prove that the defendants were conspiring to prevent the payment of rents to Smith Barry, and were inciting the tenants of that gentleman not to pay.

The defendants protested against the introduction of evidence touching matters that were anterior to the dates specified in the warrants upon which they were arrested.

After considering these protests, the court decided that the prosecution might produce testimony of a general character to prove the existence of conspiracy prior to the dates given in the warrants, but that no evidence could be permitted concerning the acts of defendants which were done anterior to the dates mentioned in the warrants.

JOHN MORLEY TAKING NOTES.

The excitement of a week ago, when the arrests of Dillon and O'Brien were so suddenly made, has its counterpart in nationalist circles today. The dispatches from Tipperary, describing the clubbing of the crowd before the courthouse by the police, created a profound sensation at the national league headquarters. The action of the police was denounced as a gross outrage. The fact that John Morley is present at the trial is considered a subject for much congratulation. It is thought that the trial will afford him more insight into the true inwardness of the Irish problem, which he came to study for himself, than weeks of ordinary travel and investigation. He will be able to tell the English liberals, with more force than ever, what the Irish people have put up with at the hands of the police, after his rough experience at Tipperary.

The nationalists are confident that, whatever the outcome of the trial may be, the brutal police episode and the evident reluctance of the court to the public will not increase the popularity of Balfour's rule.

After the court had given its decision in the matter of the protests, Mr. Ronan, on behalf of the crown, continued to recount the events that had occurred in 1889 in connection with the carrying out of the plan of campaign. He was interrupted constantly by comments and protests of defendant's counsel, who objected vigorously to the presentation of matters with which counsel claimed their clients had nothing to do. Mr. Healey declared the whole thing a patent sham, and demanded that counsel for the crown come to the particular acts with which the defendants were charged. Mr. Ronan, in reply, protested that it was entirely out of his power to shorten the proceedings.

At this point a proposal was made to adjourn, whereupon Patrick O'Brien interposed an objection, complaining that his time was being wasted in consequence of his illegal arrest.

To this Mr. Ronan took exception, declaring that the arrest of Mr. O'Brien became legal when the latter arrived in Dublin. Mr. O'Brien thereupon arose, and was about to leave the courtroom, but several constables barred the way, and he was compelled to remain. After a consultation with Mr. Healey, Mr. O'Brien consented to give bail. Alderman Dillon, of Dublin, here applied, through solicitors' for summonses against Sergeant Kennedy, of the police force, for assaults upon himself, Mr. Harrison, who represents the middle division of Tipperary in parliament, and others who were assaulted on the way to and outside of Tipperary courthouse.

The magistrates, notwithstanding many protests, declined to grant the desired summonses, but referred Alderman Dillon to another magistrate who, it is believed, will grant the summonses, and have Sergeant Kennedy brought to the bar to answer for his conduct. After the question of summonses had been decided, the presiding magistrate announced adjournment till tomorrow, and the defendants and their lawyers, followed by a throng of spectators, left the courtroom.

ENGLISH COMMENT ON THE TRIAL.

LONDON, September 26.—The News Tipperary correspondent declares that a marked change occurred in the demeanor of the police, when Mr. Morley issued from the court, on the appeal of several voices imploring him to come and save the people. Evidently the police had no desire to treat the English commoner; with discourtesy. A brutal police attack was made on Mr. Keating, proprietor of The Limerick Leader, who was so severely injured that he bled profusely from the mouth. In an editorial, The News says:

"On this occasion, the presence of Mr. Morley has given an importance to events which are commonplace in Irish administration. Messrs. Morley, Illigworth and their English colleagues, deserved the thanks of every friend of peace and conciliation."

The Chronicle says:

Morley's life is of so much value to the state that we are compelled to protest against his entering such scrimmages. Irishmen will easily misinterpret his presence, but for which it is probable the riot would not have occurred. Out of foolish deference, the police allowed him to enter court, causing a clamor for the admission of the crowd.

GERMAN GOSSIP.

The New Minister of War—The Socialists.

BERLIN, September 25.—The Post announces that General Leszynski has been appointed minister of war to succeed General Verdy Du Vernois. Sonneberg, the socialist, has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment for Lese majeste, because he remarked that Emperor William himself would in time become a socialist.

The prince of Carolath Benthen, who is a prominent conservative, made a speech recently at Breslau on the socialist question. In the course of his remarks he said that the middle classes, which saved the fatherland in 1813, were again called upon to exercise threatning dangers of socialism.

Approving the Count's Action.

PARIS, September 25.—The monarchist journals express approval of the letter of the count of Paris to Senator Bocher, justifying the course he (the count of Paris) took in his dealings with the Boulangists. Republican papers strongly condemn the count's action, and accuse him of admitting dishonorable compromises, and acknowledging that he was preparing to sacrifice the country to his ambition and hatred.

The National Prisons' Congress.

CINCINNATI, September 25.—The National Prison Congress Association of humanely inclined persons, and of persons whose duties are in connection with prisons and reformatory work, begins its annual meeting in this city tonight. The exercises were wholly preliminary. Governor Campbell and Mayor Mosby delivered the welcoming addresses, and ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes, president of the association made a reply. The work of the congress, which consists of reports of committees on assigned topics and of addresses and papers, begins tomorrow, and will continue until October 1st. One hundred and fifty delegates are expected from all parts of the United States.

A Negro Beheaded.

OPELIKA, Ala., September 25.—[Special.]—This morning about 6 o'clock, while Charlie Veal, colored, was coupling two freight cars on the Savannah and Western railroad, near the new passenger depot in this city, his feet caught in the junction between two rails, he fell across the track, the train ran over him and cut his head entirely off. He was one of the oldest brakemen on the road, and lived in Columbus, Ga.

AN ALLIANCE DEAL IN ALABAMA.

MONEY IS ADVANCED ON COTTON.

A Call for Five Hundred Thousand Bales.

$35 A BALE HAS BEEN ADVANCED.

The National Cotton Committee in New York.

THE PROCEEDINGS ARE KEPT SECRET.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., September 25.—[Special.]—George F. Gaither, business manager of the Alabama Alliance Exchange, announces, over his own signature, in the official organ of the order in Alabama, this morning, that the exchange is prepared to handle 500,000 bales of cotton, and is ready to advance $35 per bale on insured cotton in the warehouse.

A BUYER ENGAGED.

In addition, he states that the exchange has engaged a buyer who will buy cotton of the alliancemen for export, and when members of the orders desire, will settle with them after the sale of the cotton in Liverpool, paying the price brought there, less freight and insurance. It is claimed that this will net the alliancemen $5 more per bale for cotton than they now get, that much, it is said, being consumed by the middle men in ordinary transactions. Large quantities of cotton are stored all along the Alabama railroads waiting the arrival of the alliance exchange buyer.

CALLED TO NEW YORK.

Frank Baltzell, editor of The Alliance Herald, who was a member of the national committee last year, was called by an urgent telegram, last night, to New York. The cotton committee is in session in that city now, trying to perfect the arrangement to secure the advance at 4 per cent of $32 per bale on 2,000,000 bales of the American crop.

IN THE BREASTS OF NINE MEN.

The Alliance Herald today says on the subject of the negotiations:

"No alliance paper, nor allianceman, will give the public any information on the subject, for absolute knowledge about it is confined to only nine persons, who are not communicative. Those who know anything about what the cotton committee is endeavoring to accomplish, will not reveal even an inkling of what has or will be attempted, and they are surprised that the papers have even been put in possession of what has been given to the public.

RICHMOND, Va., September 25.—A special from Lexington tonight says two cadets at the Virginia Military Institute—Frank W. McConnico, of Texas, and W. T. Two hours afterwards Taliaferro died, it is presumed, from the punishment received at the hands of McConnico. The affair has cast a gloom over the entire community.

The Third Attempt at Train-Wrecking.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., September 25.—[Special.]—An attempt was made last night to wreck the south-bound express train on the Louisville road, near Falkville, forty miles north of this city. A number of crossties were piled across the track. They were not heavy enough, and the pilot of the engine knocked them off the track without derailing the train. This is the third attempt at train-wrecking on this division of the road within a few days.

After Twenty Years.

ANNISTON, Ala., September 25.—[Special.] One of the most remarkable cases ever tried in any court in this country was tried in Cleburne county circuit court a few days ago. Over twenty years ago a man named Zaner killed another man named Hogan in a row which they had over a hog. Zaner was arrested, but his trial has been continued from term to term for the past twenty years, and now he is sentenced to a term of only one year for his deed.

FELIX CORPUT

COMES BACK AND ANSWERS THE CHARGES MADE.

He Goes Before the Grand Jury of Floyd in Relation to the Bank Story—The Answer to John T. Graves.

ROME, Ga., September 25.—[Special.]—Another sensational turn in reference to that card signed by "Elector," against Corput, that was published in The Tribune.

The civil redress in the courts has not yet been abandoned, but the criminal side of the court is brought to bear upon the writer.

The grand jury of Floyd county is now in session, and a bill for libel against the author of the article referred to was brought to their attention yesterday.

BEFORE THE GRAND JURY.

Mr. Corput appeared before the grand jury as a witness. In addition to his own testimony he had the following statement from the cashier of the Capital Bank, of Macon, Ga.

Felix Corput, Rome Ga.—Dear Sir: In regard to the publication you enclose, I will say that there is nothing in the transaction or what I said in answer to the inquiry to justify the statement that you had "so munipulated its (the bank) affairs as to get possession of a considerable amount of its funds, which you have never returned." Yours respectfully, N. M. HODGKINS.

Mr. John L. Martin, editor of The Tribune, was also subpœnaed, but he was absent from the city. Mr. Martin returned to the city this morning and went up to the courthouse.

AGAINST WHOM WILL THE BILL BE FOUND?

The lawyers of Mr. Corput, Dean & Smith, demanded of The Tribune in writing that the author of the article be named, or that The Tribune would be held responsible.

It was thought that a wealthy and prominent politician was the author. However, Dr. William Bradford wrote a note saying he would assume the responsibility, and thus the matter stands.

At this writing no bill has yet been returned but whether the grand jury returns "true bill or no bill" the criminal idea is a startling one, and no doubt will tend to make men careful what they assert. Dr. William Bradford is one of the first citizens of Rome, a man of piety and honor.

The sensation is traveling and it will be the topic of conversation.

AN ALLIANCE WRANGLE.

Two Prominent Officers Appeal to the Knife.

WAYNESBORO, Ga., September 25.—[Special.]—At a meeting of the county alliance, at Minnerlyn station today, an effort was made to endorse J. P. Brinson, the independent candidate for the senate, from this, the seventeenth senatorial district. Twelve suballiances were represented at the meeting. Seven of them bolted from the convention. The five remaining endorsed him. Brinson therefore received the official endorsement of the Burke County Alliance.

Quite a serious difficulty occurred between Dr. William Chandler, the vice president of the county alliance, and Mr. Westly Bell, the president of the Alexander suballiance. Mr. Bell was dangerously cut about the neck and face. Serious doubts are entertained as to his recovery.

Politics in Forsyth.

CUMMING, Ga., September 25.—[Special.]—Politics are getting lively in this county. For a long time it looked as if we would have no candidate for the legislature. Now the thing is changed, and we have seven avowed candidates, with two more almost ready to announce. Hon. George L. Bell was the last to announce, and with his entrance into the field the fun began. What the result will be no one can foretell, but it is the opinion of your correspondent that the man who beats George Bell will represent Forsyth county in the next house.

Crisp is expected to reach his home here on Monday, and in view of his recent brilliant record in the house has many enthusiastic friends who feel like giving him a great reception on his arrival. Americus never does anything by halves, and in this case no demonstration of admiration and gratitude should be made that would transcend the measure of the deserts of this distinguished citizen of Americus, and of the estimation in which he is held by all our people.

THE TRADES' DISPLAY.

The Executive Committee Meets and Makes Important Arrangements.

MACON, Ga., September 25.—[Special.]—Macon's grand trades' display and carnival is booming.

The entire committee met today, and reported splendid progress.

The city council has granted the association the right to erect seats on certain streets along the line of march. There will be seats for the accommodation of 10,000 people. These seats will be sold at 50 cents each. On motion of Mr. Harry Tindall, of the executive committee, it was agreed to give every dollar, over and above enough to defray the expenses of the trades' display, to the King's Daughters, to be applied to the hospital fund. It is thought that the fund will be increased at least $2,000 in this way. Many people are applying for seats already. The occupants of the seats will be given the opportunity of seeing the procession three different times. Governor Gordon will address the multitude from the grand stand on Mulberry street. It is confidently believed there will be at least 50,000 people in Macon that day.

The committee desire to have ex-President Cleveland in Macon on that day of the trades' display, October 24th, and Messrs. Roff Sims and John Van Syckel were appointed to confer with the state fair association in regard to the matter. It is believed the state fair management will help the trades' display to get Mr. Cleveland here. If Cleveland doesn't come, then Blaine will be invited to be present.

On motion of Mr. Tindall, a resolution was passed thanking the Southern Travelers' Association for the great interest they have manifested in the success of the display and carnival.

All the labor unions in the city will be invited to take part in the procession.

Enough floats are already in course of preparation to insure a procession nearly two miles long. Some of the floats will be of magnificent design. Among some of the business firms that have agreed to have floats—from one to four each—are the following:

COLUMBUS CHRONICLES.

MRS. J. H. WORRILL AND HER BABE PAINFULLY BURNED.

The First Survey of the Alabama, Georgia and Florida Railroad Completed—Other Columbus News.

COLUMBUS, GA., Sept. 25.—[SPECIAL.]—Last night at 11:30 o'clock Mrs. J. H. Worrill, wife of ex-Solicitor General Worrill, of this judicial circuit, came near being burned to death. Her thirteen-months-old child was also badly burned.

The child was sick and Mrs. Worrill got up to give it some medicine. While attending to the wants of the little sufferer a candle which Mrs. Worrill held in her hand set fire to a mosquito net, and it burned with such rapidity that the entire bed was aflame in almost an instant.

Mrs. Worrill's other two children were sleeping in another bed, and with remarkable presence of mind, she hastily carried all three of the children into an adjoining room. Her wrapper was then in flames and the fire quickly spread from her to the garments of the babe in her arms and before the flames could be extinguished, both Mrs. Worrill and the babe were badly burned.

In the room where the fire started three beds were on fire at the same time, and but for the timely arrival of neighbors the entire house would have been on fire.

Mrs. Worrill was found to be painfully burned about the hands, feet and breast, and the baby also had its feet and legs blistered. Drs. Walker and Schley were called in to attend them. Mr. Worrill is away from home and has not yet learned of the sad occurrence. Messrs. W. P. Hunt and George Pearce, who, in response to the alarm, rushed in to help extinguish the flames, were burned about the hands.

DEMOREST IS GROWING.

The Evidences of Progress in the New Town.

DEMOREST, Ga., September 25.—[Special.]—Demorest is still growing. The factory of Messrs. Bryson & Watts is nearing completion, which they hope to have in operation in fifteen days, for the manufacture of bath tubs.

Messrs. Devol & McClure are also at work on their factory for the manufacture of a patent saw frame. Several other factories are to be located here, and prospectors are in the city every day looking out locations, and we can always foot up at the end of each week several additions to the population of Demorest.

Mr. James Phillips, lately of Minnesota, arrived at Demorest last week and is now building two houses, besides investing in real estate.

Mr. F. H. Briggs and wife, of Bristol, N. H., are among the late arrivals here. Mr. Briggs came south to escape the rigid winters of the northeast, and will, in all probability, engage in some manufacturing business.

Dr. Patterson's drug store is nearing completion, as is also Mr. G. D. Stone's residence on Maple avenue. Carpenters are scarce, but building is going on on every hand, and the noise of the hammer and the saw are heard from early morn until late at eve.

Mr. D. G. Suddett organized this week a branch building and loan association of the Co-operative of Atlanta, with a large number of shares subscribed.

Mr. Ed. Flore, who has a collar factory and tannery at Buford, Ga., has bought property here and will soon remove to this place to start a factory for the manufacture of collars and saddle trees. He expects to work about twenty-five hands.

The trains on the Blue Ridge and Atlantic railroad are now running on schedule time, having repaired the bridge where the recent wreck occurred just north of town.

The Demorest Manufacturing Company are now getting out a large order of furniture for an Atlanta house.

Among her varied factories, Demorest has what no other southern city has, a printers' wooden funiture and engravers' wood factory. There is a peculiar wood growing here which is equally as good, if not better, than the regulation box wood, and can be worked up in large pieces, where only very small ones can be secured of box wood.

THE COTTON GIN.

The Victims of the Gin Saw Increasing in Number.

HARMONY GROVE, Ga., September 25.—[Special.]—The cotton gin is getting in its deadly work right rapidly in this vicinity of late. Only a few days ago Mr. Ritchey, of Banks county, got his hand fearfully mangled while cleaning the motes out from under his gin. And on yesterday Mr. Jasper Wells, who is employed at Mr. Purcell's gin, in this county, got his left hand caught in the gin and badly injured. The water had been shut off and Mr. Wells was cleaning the saws of the gin, when suddenly the wheel was started by the leakage of the water upon it, and the result was a badly injured hand. The attending physician thinks that amputation of the hand may not be necessary, and Mr. Wells may escape with the loss of one or two fingers.

Master Claude Shankle, of our town, accidentally cut his ankle yesterday afternoon, but the wound is not considered dangerous and he will perhaps be out again soon.

WATER FOR GRIFFIN.

Work on the Plant Progressing Very Favorably.

GRIFFIN, Ga., September 25.—[Special.]—Work on the waterworks plant is progressing rapidly. THE CONSTITUTION's representative had a talk with Mr. E. P. Hunter, who is superintending the work of excavating for basins, this morning and learned that the water with which Griffin is to be supplied is of the purest freestone quality The supply is inexhaustible, and would afford water for a city with ten times Griffin's population. The supply is estimated at 1,000,000 gallons in twenty-four hours from the main spring, and there are others that can be drawn from for a considerable amount. The system is direct pressure and stand pipe combined. The reservoir, which will be located near the center of the city, has a capacity of more than 400,000 gallons. It is expected by the construction company to have the system in operation in four or five months.

This gives Augusta another new line. Mr. Clarke says he will have his schedule to Augusta in operation by October 15th.

A New Citizen For Griffin.

GRIFFIN, Ga., September 25.—[Special.]—Mr. J. A. Darwin, of Gunsboro, S. C., today bought out the sale and livery business of Powell & Way. Mr. Darwin believes Griffin is a good place for a first-class stable, and will use energy and money to make his business a success. This is certainly a good stock market, as Mr. Darwin will find later on.

Mr. W. A. Way will remove his family to Darien, his former home.

The Sun's Cotton Review.

NEW YORK, September 25.—Futures opened with four to five points advance, closing steady, at an advance of one point on September, and ten to fourteen points on other months from yesterday's closing prices. It was a field day on the cotton exchange. Speculation showed more vigor and activity than has been seen in a long time, and transactions foot up an unusually large aggregate—more than in the previous three days. Continued heavy rains in various parts of the south, supplemented by a sharp advance at Liverpool, were the basis of the bull arguments. But speculation for a rise had run its course by 1 o'clock. Then it began to dawn on the bulls that the heavy rains, while they may impair the quality of the crop, are generally the cause of a large yield. It was so in 1882-3, when the outturn per acre was the greatest ever recorded. Besides, there might be some exaggeration in the reports received. At any rate, selling to realize not only checked the advance but slightly weakened distant options. Spot cotton steady but quiet.

MAJOR J. F. LOWE, of Savannah, is at the Markham.

DR. C. G. BROWN, of Knoxville, reached Atlanta yesterday, and is booked at the Weinmeister.

HON. W. M. HOWARD, solicitor general of the northern circuit, who has been in the city for several days, left yesterday for his home in Lexington.

MR. W. J. SPEER, who has been for several days past at Indian Springs, returned to his home yesterday.

Pneumonia.

A person that is weak and debilitated assumes a very great risk if he fails to give a cold, be it ever so slight, immediate and quick attention. When the system of such a person becomes impregnated with a deep-seated cold, it is almost sure to result in pneumonia, a disease that is very nearly always fatal. The timely use of Smith's Tonic Syrup at the very beginning of a cold will check it at once. Its timely use has undoubtedly saved many lives. Its tonic properties are unexcelled, and its good on the circulatory system is felt at once, preventing congestion of the mucous membrane and blood vessels. It is the common sense treatment for malaria, chills and fever, colds, influenza, la grippe, etc., and is far superior to quinine in its action, never leaving any harmful after effect. It is the prescription of Dr. John Bull, of Louisville, in which city it is used almost universally. Any druggist will get you the remedy.

A CRYSTALIZED CORPSE

THE BODY OF EDWARD SOUNDSTROM STILL AT THE UNDERTAKERS.

It Has Grown as White as Alabaster, and Is Perfectly Crystalized by the Action of the Embalming Fluids.

Two months and three days is a long time to keep a body in an undertaker's establishment. But that is where the corpse of Edward Soundstrom has lain since his death on July 24th last.

At the time of his death—which was rather sudden—his wife was visiting their old home in Stockholm, Sweden.

On that account Undertaker Frank X. Bliley was requested to embalm the body and keep it above ground until her return.

Knowing that it would take her a long time to reach Atlanta, Mr. Bliley was exceedingly careful in doing the work.

The results have fully justified his case, for for after the long voyage home, Mrs. Soundstrom found some difficulty in winding up the affairs of the estate and has been delayed much longer than she apprehended.

Meanwhile the body has remained in the coffin in Bliley & Taylor's undertaking establishment, where it has been seen by a great many people.

It has grown as white as alabaster, and it is in a perfect state of chrystallization from the action of the embalming fluids. The body looks more like a marble statue than a corpse.

Mrs. Soundstrom has almost finished winding up her husband's affairs, and has arranged to start to her far off home in the Nordland on October 7th.

She will take the body with her, and will be accompanied by her husband's brother.

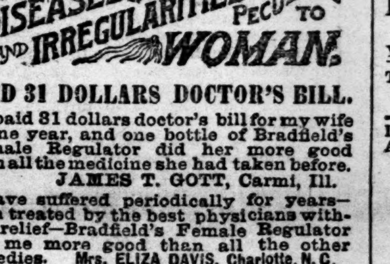

They will sail from New York on the 11th. From Christina they will still have a voyage of several hundred miles up the North sea before they reach Stockholm.

With a fair voyage and no delays, it will take twenty-nine days to complete the trip, so that there will be November snow on the hills of Sweden by the time the body of Edward Soundstrom is laid to rest in the land of his nativity.

"THE DUNCAN."—The Duncan is an elegant new hotel built in Nashville by Mr. W. M. Duncan. It is one of the completest and best equipped hotels in the south. It is not large, but what there is of it cannot be improved. The hotel has been running one year, and paid from the start, a thing that rarely happens with a new hotel. In addition to being a well-built and well-equipped hotel, Mr. Duncan exercised good judgment in selecting a man capable of running a hotel, and hence the Duncan is a success.

A BEAUTIFUL SIGHT.—One of the most beautiful scenes in this city may be witnessed at 2 o'clock, five days in every week.

It costs nothing, but it is well worth seeing. Just at that time the girls of the high school are dismissed, and standing on Whitehall, at Mitchell, one can see a long procession of bright-faced girls tripping down the street on their way homeward, chatting and laughing as merrily as birds. Atlanta can boast no prettier sight than this.

NATURE'S GONE WRONG.

THE WEATHER MAN TALKS ABOUT THE RECENT RAINSTORM.

Crops Have Been Damaged in Some Regions—Cotton Beaten From the Field—Cold Rains in the South.

The weather is the talk.

Overcoats and rubbers were called into use pretty generally yesterday, and it looked like real winter on the streets, while fires burned brightly on almost every hearthstone.

It came with a suddenness that was surprising, and everybody asked: "What has gone wrong with the weather that winter should thus be on us in full blast?"

It was such a question that a CONSTITUTION reporter called upon Sergeant S. W. Byram, of the United States signal service department.

"It is a queer change, to be sure," he replied, glancing up at the long weather arrow that danced lightly from north to east obedient to the winter gale that whistled over the roof.

"And it will continue so for sometime yet," he continued, "to judge from the present indications."

"What kind of a storm is it?"

"It is a rainstorm and is confined chiefly to the south. There has been little or no rain in the north or west yet. The storm of the past few days has been very heavy in the southern states, however, and especially so along the Atlantic coast and Gulf states."

"What is the average rain fall for the recent rainstorm?"

"Well, it was heavier in some places than in others. In Atlanta it was 1.83, Augusta 2.12, Savannah 4.84, Charleston 5.42 and Montgomery 2.20, all of which are heavy rainfalls. You can imagine how heavy the storm has been in certain localities by thinking how hard it rained in Atlanta Wednesday and multiplying that by four in your mind."

CROPS WERE INJURED.

"Were there any damaging results to crops and farms?"

"Yes, there must have been very serious damage in those regions of country that were in the worst of the storm. The injury was done by the hard-beating rains, not by swollen streams. You see, this is not the time of year for streams to overflow. That is always more apt to result in the early spring, when the melting snows have left the earth sappy and moist. But the cotton crop has been badly beaten in the fields by these hard rains, and much damage will be realized yet, I am afraid."

"Were the rains general in the south?"

"All over the south there has been some rain, but there was not much of a storm outside of Georgia, Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee."

"How long will this cold wind come from the northeast?"

"You're too hard for me. Ask me something easier."

THE WEATHER MAPS.

Sergeant Byram gets out a neat and accurate map of the weather every day.

They are the most perfect, perhaps, of any in the south, and are to be seen in the office of the signal service, in the post office, and in THE CONSTITUTION office.

These maps are drawn by the automatic outlining barometers now in use by the government, and give in a clear way the geographical shape of storms and rains, as well as the local forecasts for twenty four hours.

A PLEASANT EVENING.

The Second Concert of the Musical Section of the Turn-Verein.

The second public concert by the musical section of the Atlanta Turn-Verein, was given at Turn-Verein hall yesterday evening.

At 8:30 o'clock the concert began, and there was a very large audience assembled in the hall, in anticipation of the rare treat in store for them.

The musical section consists of twenty-four voices, making one of the finest choruses in the south.

Those participating in the programme, last evening, were:

First tenor: Abel, Niegold, Lemke, Schneider and Steinhauer.

Second tenor: Heyer, Wedemeyer and Klaitz.

First bass: Dismar, Bischoff and Schallwich.

Second bass: Hauwoldt, Fritsche and Ruhman.

Mr. John P. O'Donnelly was musical director.

The programme was as follows:

Overture—"King of Diamonds"—Lavalle—Wurm's orchestra.

Choere (a)—Die Wasserrose—Abt. (b)—Zechers Wunsch—Schroeter.

See the Pale Moon—Campana—tenor and baritone duett, Messrs. Niegold and Bischoff.

Choere (a)—Walnacht—Abt. (b)—Bier Commers—Max Braun.

Clarionet Solo—Fantasie on "Lucia"—Carney—Mr. Wedemeyer.

Chor.—Gailthaler Jaegermarsch—Koschat—Mit Orchester Begleitung.

Selection—"Trovatore"—Verdi—Wurm's orchestra.

Tenor Solo—Gewissheit—Abt—Mr. Niegold.

Choere (a)—Ave Maria—Abt. (b)—Weingalopp—Kuntze.

Baritone Solo—Die Junge Nonne—Schubert—Mr. Bischoff.

Choere (a)—Abend-Gebet—Kreutzer. (b)—Wo moecht ich sein—Zoellner.

Selection—Amorita—Czibulka—Wurm's orchestra.

Wurm's orchestra rendered delicious instrumental music as a sort of spice to the vocal portion of the programme.

Messrs. Niegold and Bischoff, both accomplished vocalists, excelled themselves in the tenor and baritone duet, "See the Pale Moon."

The clarionet solo, by Professor Fred Wedemeyer, was the hit of the evening, and the gifted tenor was recalled the third time.

In his tenor solo, Mr. Niegold's splendid voice held the audience entranced during the rendition of the song, "Gewissheit."

Mr. Bischoff's baritone solo was applauded to the echo. Mr. Bischoff is gifted with a voice of rare merit, and is one of the leading members of the section.

The entertainment was most delightful in every respect, and the large audience was treated to a rare feast of music, vocal and instrumental, by a musical coterie that has no superior in the south.

After the concert was over the hall was cleared of the seats and the ball was opened, Wurm's orchestra furnishing the music, and the remainder of the evening was devoted to dancing, which was kept up until a late hour. The evening was spent most enjoyably from beginning to end, as the entertainments given at the Turn-Verein hall always are.

THE COMMITTEE'S MEETING

To Be Held in the Chamber of Commerce Today at 4 O'Clock.

The committees will meet today.

And Merchants' Day at Piedmont exposition will be discussed and the programme finally settled.

A full list of these committees was published in yesterday's CONSTITUTION and it is expected that not a single member will stay away.

The meeting will be held in the Chamber of Commerce this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

It was first called to take place in the office of Major Livingston Mims, but owing to the large number of committeemen expected to be present, it has been changed to take place in the Chamber of Commerce.

Those expected to be present, are as follows: E. W. Marsh, M. C. Kiser, John Silvey, W. A. Gregg, Don M. Bain, R. C. Clarke, G. T. Dodd, H. Y. McCord, A. P. Morgan, F. M. Potts, Joseph Thompson, R. M. Rose, Dr. R. D. Spalding, W. W. Draper, John A Smith, A. J. Haltiwanger, Dr. J. W. Rankin, J. B. Daniel, D. H. Dougherty, J. M. High, W. H. Brotherton, J. J. Duffy, Charles Thorn, Robert Dohme, W. S. Bell, M. F. Amorous, H. J. Fear, P. H. Miller, A. G. Rhodes, P. H. Snook, Isaac S. Boyd, George B. Hinman Reid Ware, Jacob Elsas, R. B. Bullock, Charles D. Fuller, A. J. West, G. W. Adair, W. M. Scott, C. S. Kingsberry, Joe Hirsch, J. A. Anderson, John Jones, Major E. Beall, B. J. Eiseman, Charles O. Tyner, Theodore Schumann, R. L. Palmer, Charles Beermann, L. B. Folsom, George Scoville, L. H. Beck, B. J. King, S. F. Perkins, N. C. Spence, J. M. Smith, H. L. Atwater, W. A. Russell, A. L. Cuesta, L. F. Harralson, F. E. Block, M. E. Goldsmith, G. E. Johnson, L. J. Hill, J. H. Porter, R. F. Maddox.

These represent all the varied branches of trade and business in Atlanta, and with their united efforts the programme will doubtless be great.

UP IN A BALLOON.

THE JEWELL BROTHERS WILL ENTERTAIN THE MULTITUDES.

The New Wrinkle in Ballooning—Races Up and Down—The Alliance Marriages—Some Very Fine Displays.

Up among the clouds.

Sailing at a dizzy height in a balloon.

The aeronauts that will amuse the crowds at the Piedmont exposition will be the finest in the world.

Who has not heard of the famous Jewell Brothers, the men who have become renowned the world over for their daring feats in their air ships?

They have been engaged for several exhibitions at the exposition, and it goes without saying that this one feature of the great programme of the exposition will in itself be well worth the price charged for admittance into the grounds.

A new wrinkle has been unfolded in the profession of the aeronaut.

It is the double ascension, in which two balloons are sent up at the same time, each racing against the other, and when the ascension is completed, the men cut loose their parachutes, and race back to the earth again.

These races are made all the more interesting by having the men carry up scores of beautiful little toy balloons of every color, and scatter them broadcast through the air as they go up.

The Jewell brothers are the greatest known aeronauts in the universe, and their show will be decidedly one of the most thrilling on the exposition grounds.

The balloon ascensions will be sent up three days in each week while the exposition is in progress.

THEY ARE NUMEROUS.

It is a matter of interest to note how many couples are engaged to marry in Georgia at present, and how many are anxious to marry in cotton bagging,

Only a few days ago the exposition management announced the intention to have four marriages during alliance week in cotton bagging, offering two prizes of $100 and $50 respectively, for the first and second couples accepted.

Since that time more than a dozen couples have written to the secretary of the company, asking for the privilege of marrying in cotton bagging on the grounds.

These applications have come from parties in every section of Georgia, and several from other states.

Some came by letter, while some of the prospective bridegrooms, being more anxious than the rest, have called in person to tell the managers of their secret love, and ask the privilege of a cotton-bagging marriage.

Others, however, determined more than all the rest to get the prizes, have telegraphed the management, asking to be put on the list.

One thing is certain, there will be a full number of marriages during alliance week.

SOME NEW EXHIBITORS.

One of the latest displays secured by the exposition is the machinery exhibition of the Freeze Company, of Plymouth, O.

The machine is one for the manufacture of bricks, and for doing all manner of clay-working.

This will be a most interesting display, showing every detail of the work.

Julius Hartman, the florist, has engaged to place a beautiful exhibit of flowers, including the handsomest roses, chrysanthemums and hothouse plants and flowers.

The number of applications received each day by the secretary of the Exposition Company is very great, and the buildings will almost burst with handsome displays.

The committee of directors to work up a programme for Merchants' Day is hard at work, and with the assistance of Atlanta's enterprising merchants it is certain that an elegant programme will be arranged.

SOCIETY GOSSIP.

Wednesday evening at Hagersville, Ga., Mr. Maynard Durant, of Atlanta, married Miss Lillie Burton, or Norfolk, Va.

The marriage was a quiet one. The ceremony was performed at the home of Mr. A. D. Humphries, Rev. Mr. McDonald officiating. The bride, who had been visiting relatives in this city for several months, has made a host of friends in Atlanta. The groom is a popular young gentleman, connected with THE CONSTITUTION, and his many friends extend congratulations and good wishes. Mr. G. W. Humphries and wife were escorts to the bride and groom. After the marriage lunch was served and the happy couple returned to Atlanta on the 9:30 o'clock train.

SANE OR INSANE?

THAT IS THE QUESTION IN REGARD TO EDDLEMAN.

The Widow of Thomas Gresham Sues an Insurance Company in Which Her Husband Held a Policy.

Sane or insane is the question in regard to George Eddleman.

Not as regards his present condition, but as to his mental status at the time he killed Thomas Gresham.

The case is quite an interesting one on its own merits, but the fact that it recalls one of the causes celebre in Fulton county superior court, adds to its peculiar interest.

The case grew out of the claim of Mrs. Gresham against the Equitable Life and Accident Insurance Company, of New York, for $5,000 on account of an accident policy held by her husband in that company at the time of his death.

The company refused to pay the policy on demand, and Mrs. Gresham, through her attorneys, Judge John D. Cunningham and Colonel E. N. Broyles, brought suit for the recovery of the claim.

Yesterday morning the case came up before Judge Marshall J. Clarke in the superior court, Messrs. Candler, Thomson & Candler representing the company.

The case rests on the sanity or insanity of Eddleman at the time he killed Gresham.

If the plaintiff can establish the fact that he was of unsound mind at the time the murder was committed, then it renders the company's liability more probable.

If not there is some doubt as to the matter, and plaintiff's attorney's are pushing the case on that line, the insanity of Eddleman and the consequent liability of the company.

A number of witnesses were examined yesterday, and the trial will be continued today. The defense will make a vigorous fight, and it bids fair to prove one of the most noted cases in the records of the court.

"The Twelve Temptations."

Spectacle is certainly one of the most pleasing forms of stage amusement, which finds favor with all classes, and no one has so clearly monopolized this peculiar field than William J. Gilmore, who is considered at the head of all diversions of this kind. The second edition of "The Twelve Temptations," under the capable management of Charles H. Yale, will be seen for the first time here at the opera house, next Monday and Tuesday, at night and matinee. The spectacle has undergone so many changes that, apart from its title, it is, from all accounts, a production more grand and pleasing than that which was seen last season. An exchange, in commenting upon the piece, says:

"W. J. Gilmore's 'Twelve Temptations' attracted an audience at the Grand opera house last evening that filled the theater. An audience, too, that was not slow in demonstrating its admiration of the magnificent stage settings and striking transformation scenes, applauding the villain when his schemes seemed to go well, and applauding the hero when the good triumphed over the bad. In mounting 'The Twelve Temptations,' Mr. Gilmore has passed the highest mark of the spectacular drama. The scenery is the finest ever seen on a theatrical stage, while the mechanical effects are marvelous. The play abounds in special features. The ballet is strong, introducing five very pretty novelties. The dramatic portion of the show is so completely overshadowed by the mechanical and scenic effects that it is but a small part of the attraction. There is, however, an interesting plot that is worked out much clearer than is usual in spectacles, and the lines are better than the average in spectacular dramas. The company is strong.

Artistic Display.

Probably the handsomest stock of fine furniture ever shown in Atlanta is now in P. H. Snook's warerooms. It will be a revelation to most of our citizens to pass through these rooms, which are packed with the most exquisite articles, both useful and ornamental, that the writer ever saw. The reproductions of the quaintest things in furniture and novelties can be seen on all sides. Especially noticeable was an elegant $1,500 outfit for New Orleans, and another for Richmond, Va. The store is a perfect bee hive—filled with busy customers, buying and looking at hundreds of lovely things displayed throughout these immense rooms. The $10,000 painting of "Napoleon" is the finest thing of the kind in America, and should be seen by every lover of art in Georgia—by all odds the most attractive place in Atlanta. Just at this time it is the cheapest furniture house in Georgia. We understand that Mr. Snook's display at the "Piedmont" this fall will excel his beautiful exhibition of last fall, and one that his associates and Atlanta will be proud of. He also says he will be ready on opening day.—adv.

Education in Georgia.

Referring to some recent remarks in these columns relative to the unsatisfactory condition of educational facilities in the rural regions of Georgia, The Boston Advertiser remarks: "The New England district school is evidently the need of Georgia."

We shall not undertake to say what the real need of Georgia is, but it seems certain that the public school system, which is a New England institution, fails to meet the demands of the people. In this matter the state of Georgia, so far as its rural population is concerned, has swapped an admirable system for one that was invented for an urban population which believes in anything—even paternalism—that has the element of cheapness in it. In the cities, where irresponsibility has its highest development, the public school system seems to be perfect. There the jack-plane is vigorously applied, and the individuality that will not fit in any particular grade is shaved and beveled off until it is made to fit, after which a pæan of victory is sung by those who have charge of the affair.

We are saying nothing now against the public school system. It is the best we have, and, as it is developed by the people's money, it ought to be improved to the utmost, even at the sacrifice of some dogmatic ideas. The point to be made, however, is that however efficient the public school may be in the city, where the dead level of things is calculated to hide its inefficiency, it fails to fit itself to the conditions of our country life.

We are not particularly informed as to the merits or demerits of the New England district school, but if it is based on the public school idea—the idea that the state, instead of the parent, ought to have charge of the education of the child—it will not fit in with the independent and democratic ideas of our people.

We may say here that we have frequently said before that the system of education that prevailed in Georgia before the war—covering the cities as well as the country—has never been surpassed in this or any other country. The results speak for themselves. All the great men that Georgia has produced were the products of this system, and it thus stands vindicated. It was known, in the country, as the old field school; in the city it was the academy. Each county educated its own poor, side by side with the rich, and the teachers, proud of their profession and their opportunities, devoted themselves to the business of nursing and fostering the individuality of each pupil. Many of these teachers were men and women from New England, and they nobly illustrated their calling. They assisted in giving to the educational system of Georgia a distinction that it has never reached since.

The Preachers Take a Hand.

We recently referred in these columns to the interest certain distinguished divines are taking in politics—notably a preacher of the gospel in Dictator Reed's district in Maine. The feature to which we wished to call attention was that these reverend gentlemen are generally republicans, and their lances are leveled at the republican party.

The Maine parson had scarcely pronounced the benediction on his political sermon, when the voice of the Rev. Thomas Dixon, pastor of a Baptist church in New York city, was thundering from the pulpit in denunciation of certain republican legislation—namely, the federal election bill.

Mr. Dixon paid his respects to this bill in most emphatic tones, and warned his congregation against the various vicious measures which the republicans were trying to impose on the country. But at the close of his sermon, which greatly stirred his congregation, he made this remarkable prophecy:

> This legislation, which is based upon partisanship and sectionalism, must stop. But before it does stop, my friends, there must be a funeral. Some day will come when God will bury some good men north and some good men south. Then this thing will cease. May He hasten the funerals.

There is only one way of looking at this prophecy: It was meant as a terrible warning to the republicans. But while it may point a moral, we sincerely trust that it will not adorn a funeral; and while the minister's motive was clearly a good one, it was rather a savage thing for a minister of the gospel to ask God to "hasten the funerals" of "good men, north and south."

If this gloomy forecast of the country's future will bring the Hon. Tom Reed and his followers to their right minds, it will serve a good purpose. But we hope for something better than funerals in the future. We have had enough of them in the past, and we would not willingly spare one good man from the north or south. We have need of all of them.

Political discussions are out of place in the pulpit; but what must be the status of the republican party when even the ministers who vote its ticket are waging holy war against it from the elevation of their pulpits!

A Plea for Birmingham.

Our esteemed contemporary, The Birmingham News, asks this question: "Will not the press do us justice?" The question does not refer to The News itself, as justice is generally done that bright evening newspaper wherever it is read, but it has reference to the city in which it is published.

The News claims that the schools of Birmingham are educating 1,500 children, and this within a census-defined population of 28,000 inside the narrow limits of the city proper. There is a church and school for each thousand inhabitants, and four churches are building that will cost $300,000.

But our contemporary complains that, in spite of these facts, which are entirely creditable ones, the world has rated Birmingham as being singularly immoral, and this is the explanation The News gives of the state of affairs which prevails there:

> The legislature causes all convicted criminals to be brought hither and here hired out. They are educated in crime and experts in its practices and degraded already beyond the reach of fear or shame or reform. From five to thirty of these criminals are liberated here each week and month. The newspapers and telegraphs and Sam Jones tell the rest of the pitiful, shameful story which makes the world believe that Birmingham, having the best schools and churches, and more of them, in proportion to the number of the people, than any city in the south, is deemed abroad most vicious and depraved.

Though THE CONSTITUTION has never misrepresented Birmingham, it cheerfully gives place to the defense which our contemporary makes. And right here we would suggest for Birmingham that legislative reform which seems necessary in this matter of making Birmingham the criminal center of Alabama, if, indeed, a reformation in this respect be possible.

From what our contemporary says, we infer that Birmingham is making the best of its moral advantages, and that, considering the criminal class with which the city has to contend, it is doing remarkably well. There is no doubt that the city has been greatly misrepresented, but the frequency of crime there is responsible for such misrepresentation. Let us lay the blame where it belongs, and in the mean time let the Alabama legislature give the citizens relief, if it can.

The View They Take of It.

When a southern newspaper notes the prosperity of southern enterprises, keeping pace with its state's development and placing it on record before the country, the republican press takes up the theme and congratulates the republican party on the showing that is made, attributing whatever prosperity may be apparent to the influences of republican government.

We have frequently pointed out the mistake of republicans in this matter, and they must be well aware of it when such statements are made. The Chicago Evening Journal, for instance, in commenting on the industrial development of the south, in her iron and other interests, has this to say:

> This is one of the many fruits of republican tariff legislation. The complete census returns will show that the south has increased since 1880 in productive wealth to a greater extent and in a greater ratio than it ever before increased in two decades. A vast source of wealth has been created and unexampled prosperity is the result. Yet the south opposes with a hostile vigor and an envenomed determination hardly ever known in politics the party that has caused this great growth and that has insured so much for its future

This is the style in which they talk, unmindful of the fact that the south has attained to her present prosperity in spite of the republican party, which is ever seeking by hostile acts and legislation to retard her growth; which is formulating bills of the McKinley stripe, and clamoring for the passage of other bills that would have a tendency to destroy the very prosperity on which it congratulates itself with such complacency.

The republican party has done nothing for the south, but much against it. Her prosperity is due to her great natural resources and the energy and enterprise of her citizens. The fact that some republican capital is engaged in the work of southern development has no significance as far as that party is concerned; all capital that comes from the north is not of a republican complexion. Republicans doubtless know a good thing when they see it; if they are investing any money in the south, it is from a mercenary, not a patriotic purpose. The south is working out her own salvation and is strong in her own strength.

As to Southern Labor.

In a recent review of the industrial advantages of the south, The Manufacturers' Record calls special attention to the cheapness of labor here—in the fields, the mines and in other branches of industry.

It says that southern laborers work longer hours than northern laborers, and adds that it is the extra hours, as well as the low rate of wages, that make the cost of all work done by unskilled hands much less in the south than in any other section of the country.

The Record makes these statements in the belief that they will induce investments by northern capitalists in southern enterprises, for it says that they—the capitalists—"have found that they could lay out roads, fell forests, run saw and planing mills, make brick, erect buildings, at prices far lower than they could do precisely the same things at the north."

There is, of course, a basis of truth for the above statement, but taking everything into consideration, we are persuaded that the unskilled laborer is no better off in the north than he is in the south—if indeed he is as well off there. There is a greater demand for his services here, and he lives for less than he could at the north.

Skilled labor commands the very best of wages in the south; it cannot be had on any other terms; the skilled laborer is better off here than he is at the north in the matter of wages and the cheapness of living. His services are always in demand and frequently at a premium.

The south needs capital; but she needs laborers also—skilled laborers and laborers of all kinds.

We have referred to this artirle in The Manufacturers' Record in the hope that its statements, made in good faith, may not be misleading and deter labor from coming to the south.

A northern or western mechanic, when he reads that wages are low here, and that the laborer is required to work longer hours than elsewhere, will change his mind about coming south, and very naturally.

There is plenty of work for the laborer here, and fair prices for faithful and efficient work.

AS THE American Boulanger, Speaker Reed has been very successful thus far.

THE DEADLOCK in the tariff conference is giving Mr. McKinley's conscience a great deal of trouble. A man with a raw conscience doesn't stand much of a chance in the every-day hurly-burly of a republic.

IT IS said that Senator John Jeems Ingalls owns a good many mortgages on farms in Kansas. This is probably a good way for a senator to secure the good will of his constituents.

NOW THAT the lottery companies have been excluded from the mails, the question arises, how much interest have Wanamaker and the administration secured in the express companies? This is a very interesting question.

THE IMAGINATIVE astronomers have a conceit that Mars is making signals to this planet. If the inhabitants of Mars know anything of the republican party, they would blow out the lights, close the blinds and put up the bars.

KENNEDY SAYS no democratic newspaper endorsed his attack on Quay. Kennedy is mistaken. Considering that the speech was made by a man not very much better than Quay it was a very good one.

THE LOTTERY legislation gives the express companies a very fat job, but the companies will have to contribute heavily to the republican campaign fund.

THE J. B. FORAKER investigation seems to have caused itself to be forgotten by the republicans.

A NEW YORK hotel bell-boy recently stole $12,800. What is to hinder such a genius as this from taking Mr. Quay's place as leader of the republican party?

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

THE MONUMENT to the confederate dead of Fairfax county, Virginia, at Fairfax Courthouse, will be dedicated October 1st. The orator on that occasion will be Senator John W. Daniel, and a poem will be read by the Hon. James L. Gordon. Chaplains Rev. William M. Dame and the Rev. Dr. Gardiner will officiate. Colonel Arthur Herbert, of Alexandria, will be chief marshal. General William H. Payne will preside during the ceremonies. The monument will be presented by Captain Ballard to the Ladies' Memorial Association, and received in their behalf by General William H. F. Lee.

THE LOCAL poets are now engaged in writing odes on Delamater. This will settle his fate, if nothing else does.

UNDER THE title of "Ravenswood," Scott's doleful novel, "The Bride of Lammermoor," was placed on the stage of the Lyceum theatre in London, Saturday night, with Mr. Irving as Edgar and Ellen Terry as Lucy Ashton. The dramatization is by Herman Merivale. All admit that the stage painting is superb, but there is a difference of opinion as to the probable ultimate success of the play. It is full to the brim of sentiment and melancholy.

CONGRESSMAN MILLS has been lecturing on education in Wisconsin, and the Milwaukee papers are mad about it. The idea of a Wisconsin editor calling Texas a "barbarian state!"

SARA BERNHARDT gravely requests a reporter to warn the American public, however much they may desire to become acquainted with her Cleopatra, not to "go to the theatre to see snakes." In spite of this admonition, it is to be feared that some theatre-goers will continue the pernicious habit of "seeing a man" between the acts.

WHENEVER an electric light lineman trims a street light in this town nowadays, says The New York Sun, a crowd of men and women stop and watch him work, half expecting to see him fall off his step-ladder shocked to death. If he makes a sudden move while he is on the ladder the hearts of the watchers jump to their throats, and sometimes there are exclamations of horror. The linemen often amuse themselves by playing on the feelings of the crowd. They will jump off their ladders two or three steps to the pavement, or will turn around quickly. Almost always some nervous person will cry out.

A UNIVERSALIST preacher in Baltimore has accepted the republican nomination for congress because he believes "that high and patriotic and moral sentiments are needed to elevate politics from the degredation in which it has fallen through selfish and designing men." This moves an exchange to remark that whatever may be thought of the medium which the reverend gentleman has selected for the accomplishment of this laudable aim, it must be admitted that his party is consistent enough in nominating him. It, too, has apparently ceased to believe in future punishment.

WITH THE WEEKLY EDITORS.

Editor Rorie, of The Banks County Gazette, puts it very strong on the man who does not take a newspaper. He says: "A man who takes no newspaper, if he has a family, his children are as green as gourd guts."

The editor of The Banks County Gazette is a very popular man in his town. In his last issue he acknowledged the receipt of a mess of beans from one lady, a sack of potatoes and apples from another, and a "nice pound cake with frost on it," from a third.

Several nights ago a thief visited the fowl house of Editor Rainey, at Dawson, and stole a fine turkey gobbler. When a thief gets so hard up that he has to rob an editor it is time for the police to run him in.

Mr. J. S. Carter has become one of the editors of The Baxley Banner. In his salutatory he says "he proposes to say and write what he pleases, regardless of consequences," and "in case he gives offense the latch string hangs on the outside of the door." We should imagine from the tone of Editor Carter's article that he is without doubt the fighting editor of The Banner.

The New South, published at Douglasville by Elam Christian, is one of the best edited papers that come to this office, while its general make up and typographical appearance are unexcelled.

The Fort Valley Enterprise was three years old yesterday and without doubt the liveliest infant of that age in the state. Editor Kerch has made his paper a first-class one in every respect and we hardly see how he could well make any additional improvements. We wish The Enterprise many more happy birthdays.

TALKING AT RANDOM.

A week devoted to the reminiscences of Judge Elder, the stories of George Collier, the water of the Indian Spring, with now and then a game of whist to fill in the time not devoted to one of the other three amusements, would, I have reason to know, bring health to any sick man. A great combination it is, indeed, and one which everybody who has visited the famous resort will thoroughly appreciate.

It is not often that we youngsters of today have an opportunity of talking with an "oldest inhabitant" who is an oldest inhabitant in reality. I found one last week in the person of the patriarchal Judge Elder, and I have been reveling in stories of the days when the Indians hunted over the country now rich in the cotton it bears—the days when McIntosh's sway was absolute, and those immediately preceding that chief's sensational death. Judge Elder has, I believe, passed his seventy-fifth milestone, but he looks all of fifteen or twenty years younger. He was born and his boyhood days were spent on a plantation twelve miles from his present home, and and on that plantation his father has lived to the ripe old age of ninety-six. A long-lived race, you think. Yes, but that is not the only instance of its kind in the country about the spring. The best advertisement that place has is found in the appearance of the people who have spent their lives in drinking of its waters, for a sturdier, healthier race it would certainly be impossible to find.

* * *

Judge Elder is the oldest inhabitant of the town of Indian Springs, and many are the stories he tells of the early days when this was summer Mecca of the wealthy planters of middle and southern Georgia, who come with their families and negroes and spent months there. All of these stories the judge will soon give the public in his own way in a volume of reminiscences which he is preparing. As I don't want to anticipate that, I won't attempt to tell any of these stories. That such a volume would meet with an extensive sale any person who has sat upon the broad veranda of the Elder house and listened to the judge's tales will guarantee.

Then the stories of the cures the water has effected. These are almost without number, and many of them are wonderful indeed. The person who has never been at the springs may wonder at the state reserving to the people their water; but you have only to talk with some one who has felt its benefits to get the explanation. In our party of Atlantians, there were half a dozen who are ready upon the slightest provocation to sing the praises of that water.

The third feature of Indian Springs life I must dismiss in rather short order. George Collier's stories are immense, but I don't seem to be able to recall those that would read well. That may be due to my inability to tell a story—and it may not. But any visitor to the spring could write a great deal about the big work Mr. Collier has in hand. His Wigwam will, when finished, be one of the finest hotels at any southern resort, and this, with the new building which Ed Elder has in contemplation, will give Indian Springs the finest possible accommodations.

Of two things in connection with this resort I feel certain—that the waters are wonderful, and that next year will find this one of the most popular resorts in the south.

Dr. Perkins, of Burke, tells me that county is having more than its share of politics. The regular nominees for the senate and the house are, he says, to have serious opposition. Just how it will result he wouldn't pretend to predict; but after some weeks' absence he was, when I saw him, hurrying home to take a hand in the fun.

* * *

How many people in Atlanta see The Illustrated American? I find by consulting the dealers that the paper finds a ready sale. "Of one thing you may be certain," said Frank Lester, yesterday. "Everybody who gets it is delighted."

That is easy to believe—indeed it couldn't be otherwise. The American is the most notable success in the journalism of today. I mean artistic success. No other publication of its kind in the world approaches it in excellence. Last week's issue, for instance, devotes several pages to a story of the visit of the French princes to the United States, the greater part of the article being devoted to the experiences of the Comte de Paris in the civil war. The present installment of the Historic American papers is devoted to Valley Forge. This number is especially interesting to devotees of tennis, a great deal of space being devoted to the recent national tournament at Newport, with portrait of all the crack players.

These are but three of the features of one number. Every issue contains equally interesting matter, all of it illustrated in a manner far beyond anything ever seen in this country before.

FIRED UPON DIAZ.

A Recent Attempt to Assassinate the President of Mexico.

NEW ORLEANS, September 25.—A Times-Democrat special says a prominent railway official who reached San Antonio this morning from the City of Mexico, states that during the national celebration on the 11th instant, an attempt was made upon the life of President Diaz, by firing upon him while he was witnessing a pyrotechnic display. There were forty men in the murderous plot, fifteen of whom are now in jail. Government officials have suppressed news of the dastardly deed.

THE TRIAL OF BIRCHALL

The Prisoner Does Not Flinch Under the Stare of the Crowd.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., September 25.—With a desire to push the Birchall trial through in a shorter time than it has threatened to occupy, the court met this morning at 9:30 o'clock, half an hour earlier than it previously assembled. A crowd gathered around the cab which brought the prisoner to the court, to see him alight. In spite of 100 eyes watching him, Birchall does not flinch. He was in the dock this morning about twenty minutes before the judge entered the courtroom. He was attended by his special guard, Enthwistle, who stated that Birchall slept well and had eaten a hearty breakfast. There was even a greater attendance of ladies than on any previous occasion. Their entrance just as the court opened interrupted the proceedings and made several calls of "Silence" necessary, and even then the proceedings had to be suspended for some time until order was restored.

The first witness, S. B. Fuller, manager of the Imperial bank here, identified the signature, "W. A. Somerset," on certain checks, as that of the prisoner, who opened an account with the Imperial bank on the 10th or 11th of December, 1888. He identified also certain letters put in evidence as those of the prisoner.

DAMAGING TO BIRCHALL.

A number of letters and telegrams were read in spite of the objection of Counsel Blackstock, the effect of which was to show that the prisoner had carried on systematic deceit on Benwell and his father, and after the young man's disappearance, on young Pelley, who was with them and who was very anxious about young Benwell's not appearing.

During the reading of the telegrams exposing his fraud, Birchall's unusually pale complexion was suffused with a light flush of red. He made notes occasionally during the reading. A number of witnesses were examined with the view to identifying Birchall and Benwell as the two young men who arrived at Eastwood on the day Bonwell disappeared, and walked direct from the train in the direction of the swamp where Benwell's body was found.

In several cases Birchalls identification was direct and positive, although very few witnesses withstood the cross examination by Counsel Blackstock without becoming confused.

All of today's witnesses, except one lady, had testified before the inquest and where one of these said more or less than they did before the coroner that circumstance was turned to good account by Blackstock. A young man, named Crosby, whose identification of Birchall was positive and who had also identified Benwell's body, testified to having met both men in the road February 17th, near the place of the murder.

During his examination, this witness was overcome by the excitement of his unusual surroundings and by the heat of the room, and fainted away. He was allowed to remain seated during the remainder of his examination. Though cross-examined closely, he insisted upon the truth of what he had stated.

Interest in the trial has not abated. If possible, it was increased by today's proceedings. The audience was two-thirds ladies, and more people remained outside the courtroom than could be accommodated within.

Postal Authorities Find Lottery Advertisements in The Age-Herald.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., September 25.—[Special.]—The edition of The Age-Herald, arriving in this city this morning by mail, was examined by the postoffice authorities and found to contain lottery advertisements. The paper was stopped and stored in the postoffice.

Major W. W. Screws and F. P. Glass, of The Montgomery Advertiser, were arrested here today for violating the anti-lottery law in mailing The Advertiser containing lottery advertisements since the passage of the law. They gave bond and were released. It is stated here that Mr. W. P. Pinckay, president of The Age-Herald company, will be arrested in Birmingham on warrants sworn out by the postal officials who stopped The Age-Herald here this morning.

TO BREAK A COAL COMBINE.

A Petition in the United States Court in Nashville.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., September 25.—Hon. John Ruhm, United States district attorney for the Middle Tennessee district, under direction of the attorney general of the United States, today filed a petition in the clerk's office against companies owning or operating mines from which coal is shipped to Nashville and all local dealers selling to the consumers, numbering three or four dozen companies. The petition alleges that a combination or trust exists between the above corporations, firms and individuals, to fix prices for the Nashville coal market and thus monopolize and control the coal trade in Nashville. The petition asks for an injunction in accordance with the provisions of the anti-trust law passed by congress July 2, 1890, and is probably the first proceedings taken under the law.

AMERICUS FORGES AHEAD.

QUITE AN IMMENSE COMBINATION

Which Is to Include All the Big Enterprises.

CONTROL TO BE KEPT AT HOME.

The News Brought By The Constitution

SETS ALL THE PEOPLE TO TALKING

AMERICUS, Ga., September 25.—[Special.]—Notwithstanding the denial in the Americus morning papers of the correctness of THE CONSTITUTION'S report on yesterday of the "big deal," it will be seen from the card of Colonel S. H. Hawkins below, that he virtually admits the substantial correctness of the statement made in THE CONSTITUTION.

A Card.

To The Times: You ask if the report in THE CONSTITUTION of yesterday, in which the "big deal made by Americus capitalists" is discussed, is true.

The report, as a whole, could with propriety be denied, and yet there are statements in it akin to what has transpired between the parties named, and on the subject matter treated.

If the people of Americus desire to know more about the so called "big deal," and will meet in large enough numbers in the opera house at 5 o'clock this afternoon, an opportunity will be given those that know something about it to speak, and to those that feel so inclined, to criticise. S. H. HAWKINS.

THE RESULT OF THE MEETING.

A large number of the representative business men met at the county courtroom at 5 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Thornton Wheatly was called to the chair, and Colonel W. A. Dodson was made secretary.

At the request of the chairman, Colonel Hawkins made a statement of the object of the meeting, which was to ascertain the sense of the people as to the organization of a local syndicate to acquire the various properties mentioned in Monday's CONSTITUTION as being engineered by Mr. Felder and the New York Contract Company. Colonel Hawkins thought, in a movement so fraught with benefit to the public, a few men should not bear the burden alone, but that everybody in Americus should lend a helping hand in view of the magnitude of the proposed deal, and the general benefits to the community.

It was unanimously voted, as the sense of the meeting, that these properties should be controlled by an Americus syndicate, composed, as far as possible, of all the property owners; and, upon motion of Captain H. C. Bagly, the chairman appointed a committee, with plenary powers, to canvass for subscriptions to such a company, or take such other action as they might deem best, and report at a subsequent meeting.

THE MEN IN CHARGE.

The committee, composed of some of the strongest men in the community, consists of Colonel S. H. Hawkins, chairman, and Messrs. B. R. Hollis, H. C. Bagly, Arthur Rylander and W. M. Hawkes. Brief speeches were made by Mayor Felder, Captain H. C. Bagly, president of the Americus Investment Company, and Mr. Merrill Calloway, in support of the ideas suggested by Colonel Hawkins, and there seems to be no doubt that the people of Americus can be counted on to follow in any enterprise in which Colonel Hawkins will take the lead, and developments of the most important character may be expected as a result of the action augmented at the meeting today.

THE GAELIC CLUB.

The Cases Against C. P. Johnson and John Johnson Dismissed.

The Gaelic Club is free from its troubles.

Yesterday the cases against C. P. Johnson, who was, as a member of the club, charged with keeping open a tippling house on the Sabbath day, and against John Johnson, an employe of the club, on a similar charge, were dismissed in police court.

Alderman Howell and Councilmen Kinyon and Lambert were presiding in the recorder's court at the time, Judge Kontz being absent from the city.

The case was tried Wednesday, but the decision was held up until yesterday.

On Sunday, several weeks ago, the police raided the headquarters of the Gaelic Club on Broad street, and took charge of a lot of liquor and equipments which were found there, believing that the place was a blind tiger.

Mr. John Johnson was in charge at the time, and a case was made against him. Mr. C. P. Johnson subsequently called at the station house, and explained that the place was occupied by a regularly chartered club—the Gaelic, which was strictly law-abiding.

Mr. Johnson stated that he was a member of the club, and on this the case against him was made.

But the cases were dismissed as stated, and the Gaelic and its members are happy.

His Death Was Natural.

Calvin Payne, the negro whose sudden death, mentioned in yesterday's paper, appeared to have been caused by medicine given him by a doctor, has been buried without an inquest. Investigation developed that there was no ground for the suspicion that the negroes in their excitement cast upon the medicine. Tom Payne, the father of the dead negro, who was also taking the same medicine, and who seemed to be the worse for it, is getting all right again.

Moving In.

Hirsch Bros. will open up in their spacious new building thismorning. All the fixings were completed yesterday, and last night a large force of men were engaged in transferring the stock of clothing and furnishing from the store temporarily occupied by the firm just across Whitehall street. In their new building Hirsch Bros. have one of the most elegant stores in the city, commodious and a perfect model of convenience.

An Owner Wanted.

There is a fine set of brand new carriage harness at the station house awaiting an owner. It was captured by the police yesterday. John Page, a negro, had the harness and was trying to sell it to Mr. Tom McWilliams, on Decatur street. Mr. McWilliams turned the negro and the harness over to the police.

Natural Gas Struck.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., September 25.—[Special.]—Twelve miles west of this city this morning a party of engineers, prospecting for coal for the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, struck a vein of natural gas. A hole had been bored to a considerable depth, when a strong volume of gas burst forth. It was ignited and burned freely. Late this afternoon the gas was still flowing, and it is thought the find may prove a valuable one.

PEOPLE HERE AND THERE.

JUCH.—Emma Juch, it is said, wears a piece of the true cross as an amulet.

ALLEN.—John F. Allen, the pioneer cigarette maker, who recently died in his seventy-fifth year, was born in Ireland.

PRATT.—Enoch Pratt, the Baltimore philanthropist, who celebrated his eighty-second birthday recently, is as strong mentally as he ever was, and takes a keen interest in everything that goes on.

GLADSTONE.—Mr. Gladstone, having finished moving all his books into his new library at Hawarden castle, is now filling in his holiday leisure by writing a lot of essays for his favored magazines.

GOVERNOR GORDON MAKES REPLY

TO THE CARD OF DR. MACUNE.

The Reasons Why the Name Was Withdrawn.

DR. MACUNE AND THE ALLIANCE.

A Favorable Report from the Arkansas Committee Secured.

SOME VERY INTERESTING READING.

ON THE TRAIN, September 25.—[Special.]—Governor Gordon was seen on the train by a representative of THE CONSTITUTION last evening and interviewed as follows during the stop at Macon:

"Do you intend to reply to Dr. Macune's card in this morning's CONSTITUTION?"

"No; I will let Mr. Forbes, who knows all about the matter, do that."

"Have you secured the capital for the cotton-seed oil enterprise?"

"No, not a dollar. We are not ready for that. I shall give my attention to it when I have more time."

"Where do you propose to raise the capital?"

"In Europe, and in this country also. We have propositions before us for a French company which are very tempting, but, as I said, we are not entirely ready. I shall make the whole programme up at an early day."

"What advantage do you claim over the old process?"

"We get a great deal more oil at a less cost, and a far better oil. By Professor H. C. White's analysis we get a meal with at least 10 per cent more than the meal of the old process. Why, we can take the meal of the present mills, after they have taken from it every ounce of oil they can extract, and get from eighteen to twenty gallons, and, perhaps more, from a ton of meal."

"Do you extract the oil by improved presses?"

"No; we do not use presses at all. We dispense with all that machinery and power. We simply use solvents, which are injected into the meal, and the oil flows from it into another tank, and without a ton of pressure."

"Is the process new?"

"Comparatively new. It is, so far as cotton-seed oil is concerned; but it has been in use for some years in extracting oil from flax seed, etc., and has been fully tested in cotton seed. It is the invention and discovery of Mr. Evans, of Cleveland, O., where the process is in use on a great scale."

"You think, then, it will be a success."

"Yes, I cannot doubt it, but I prefer to give the opinion of Mr. Strenby, who has consented to act as a director, and who is one of the foremost experts in cotton-seed oil mills in this country. He says it will simply revolutionize the oil business."

THE USE OF COLONEL POLK'S NAME.

"What about the use of Colonel Polk's name as director and vice president?"

"I prefer that Colonel Polk's letter answer that question. I shall give his letter to Mr. Forbes, and several other documents, which will make interesting reading. Colonel Polk is a gentleman of high character, I think, and I am sure he has forgotten."

"What about Dr. Macune's name?"

"Dr. Macune's duplicity in this, as in other matters affecting southern interests, will very fully appear when the facts are made known."

"Did he authorize the use of his name?"

"Of course he did, and then asked that the name of another prominent allianceman be substituted instead of his own. Dr. Macune's peculiarities will appear when I tell you as I do, that he asked to have another name substituted in order that he might, as he assured me, help the cause more effectively by urging through the columns of his paper, The Economist, that the alliance take hold of it and make it an alliance movement. He not only did this, but had the Arkansas State Alliance to appoint a committee, and the committee made a favorable report, which Dr. Macune brought me and handed to me at the very time when he asked that another name be substituted in order that he might more effectively serve the cause through his alliance journal."

"Is the movement to be taken up by the alliance?"

"I do not know; I hope so. I have talked to only a few leading members of the order, Mr. Northen among them, and only to him a year or two ago. He and they were much impressed with it. If I have used any name without authority, it is Mr. Northen's; but the fact is, the circular was printed only for conference with parties about the organization and to save writing long letters; and the names were inserted, not for publication at all, but simply for interchange of views with all the parties concerned. I rather think, on reflection, that Mr. Northen did express a willingness to serve, although this was a year or two ago, and before the process was secured, and when we were trying to secure it."

"You have it now for the whole south?"

"Yes, for the whole world, in extracting oil from cotton seed; but the capitalization will have to be greatly increased, I presume. In a few years, if it is such a success as experts think it, the capital will have to be very much larger."

"Do you wish to say anything about Dr. Macune's statement that you attacked him because he withdrew his name?"

"Nothing, except that it will be seen, in the first place, as I told you, he never withdrew except to more effectually work for the enterprise. In the next place, the change occurred in July, and I never assailed Dr. Macune until a few days ago, and would never have assailed him then, as my words in the speech I made show, but for his unpardonable assault upon me in his paper, and his wholly unjust misrepresentation about my attitude towards the alliance. The truth about it is, a more unwarranted attack was never made by any man than Dr. Macune made upon me. I was amazed at it, and my indignation was very great. I had never known anything about Macune. I had supposed him to be a true friend of the south and a gentleman of character when I asked him to become connected with this enterprise, as the whole purpose was to compete in the interest of our farmers, with the monopoly of the great cotton-oil trust, and no man, as I supposed, had ever entered into an enterprise with more zest than he appeared to do in this. When, therefore, I found in his paper a series of utter misrepresentations of myself, and when I discovered the plot which had been made to defeat me by misrepresentation, I denounced him and the programme very earnestly. Had I known Dr. Macune then as I know him now, he would never have had the opportunity of becoming associated with any enterprise I was connected with.

"I had expected, because I thought I was entitled to it, the support of every leader of the alliance in my race, and I could not permit, without denouncing it, this effort to place me in antagonism with the alliance and to create the impression on the alliance that I was the agent of the money power. It was so false and so absolutely the reverse of the truth that I felt justified in making the denunciation I did. Everybody knows this was the reason of my denunciation of Dr. Macune, and he knows it as well as anyone else."

"What about the $5,000 of stock?"

"It was to be given to the directors in lieu of salary for the work of organization in the states. Men cannot be expected to work without compensation, and this was their compensation, and they were expected to give a great deal of time to the work." W. G. C.

GENERAL GORDON IN HELENA.

He Delivers an Eloquent Speech to the Alliancemen.

HELENA, Ga., September 25.—[Special.]—A great crowd gathered here today in spite of the murky and threatening weather, to attend the barbecue and the ceremonies attending the presentation of the new brick warehouse, 80x100 feet, which the Americus Investment Company tenders to the alliancemen of the three counties which corner at Helena, the junction of the Savannah, Americus and Montgomery and East Tennessee roads.

It was a mixed crowd of men and women from all the surrounding counties, with here and there a yellow or white ribbon to show that the wearer was a member of the alliance.

The men strolled about and talked, and the women stood patiently with little children tugging at their skirts until the hour of 11, when Governor Gordon began his speech. For an hour and a quarter longer they stood in the open air and listened while the governor discussed finance. They listened respectfully to what he had to say about finance, and when he began to come down on the money power, they frequently interrupted him with applause.

The governor was beseiged by callers at the hotel, and at the barbecue he was shaking hands so much that it was with difficulty that he got through dinner.

The Americus party came with a presentation orator, but their train did not arrive till Governor Gordon was about to take the train for Atlanta. Colonel Langston and Colonel Northen had been invited but did not come.

The Governor's Speech.

Governor Gordon began by congratulating the alliancemen of Telfair, Wilcox and Montgomery upon the tender of the warehouse to them by the Americus Construction Company, which built the Savannah, Americus and Montgomery railroad. Having done this he proceeded to discuss the financial policy of the government, suggesting reforms which would give the people a stable and abundant currency. Following this he suggested a plan to enable the farmers of the south to get such advances on their cotton as would enable them to hold it for fair prices.

"Why, my countrymen," said the governor, "is it any wonder that the agricultural people of this country are organized? Even then, more than fifteen years ago, the man who now addresses you, predicted that the agricultural people would organize, unite in a great brotherhood, and be knocking at the doors of congress, and instead of appealing to them for relief, would demand it. [Applause.]

"Eighteen years ago, as a life member of the agricultural society," said he, "I stood in the city of Griffin and pleaded with the farmers to organize into a compact, solid brotherhood, that we might the better resist the encroachments of the money power. At last it has come.

An Income Tax.

"Another way to get relief," said he, "is through an income tax. I would put a tax upon incomes of $10,000, and largely increase upon $20,000, make it still higher upon $40,000, and higher still upon $60,000, and increasing in geometrical ratio until these enormous sums could not be accumulated.

"I would raise the tax until labor, enterprise, and industry would be freed from the excessive burdens which weigh them down—until it was absolutely impossible for one man in this republic to accumulate enough money to buy all the farms of Georgia. They pay less tax than is just and requisite. With their gigantic means protected by the great power of this government, it has been for twenty-five years run in their interest, instead of in yours.

"My countrymen, these are not welcome doctrines for the money power of this country; but I am thankful that the day has at last come when we are banded together in a brotherhood that can make itself heard, not only in the halls of congress, but from one end of the continent to the other." [Applause.]

This ended the discussion of the financial policy of the government, and the governor devoted the rest of his speech to explaining his plans to enable the farmers to hold their cotton for satisfactory prices. He suggests the storing of cotton in alliance warehouses all over the south at convenient places, these to be insured and the owner to receive certificates from these warehouse companies to the amount of 80 per cent of the cotton's value. These certificates would serve as collateral, and upon them the owner of the cotton could borrow money in any bank. Or if desired the certificates of the whole crop, about $300,000,000 in amount, could be negotiated in England and the money could be had on them at a reasonable rate of interest. The result would be that in a few months the mills at Manchester and everywhere would be in need of cotton, the world would be demanding what the farmers had to sell and they would get better prices. The cotton in the meantime would be in the hands of alliancemen—their own brethren—and would it not be better to have it there than in the hands of government employes? They would pay the interest, it was true, but would escape all the complications of dealing with the government. There were 333 members in the house of representatives and only one for the subtreasury bill, eighty-four in the senate and not one for the subtreasury bill. If the alliance in every district where they were organized succeeded in electing a congressman, pledged to the bill, they would still lack a great deal of having a majority of congress.

In conclusion, the governor asked how the alliance could effect the reforms it aimed at if it limited itself to one measure upon which all of the brethren could not agree, which dissension was being created in the brotherhood itself. And he urged harmony in alliance ranks and the adoption of a policy on which all the friends of reform could unite. W. G. C.

DIED AT DINNER.

J. R. CALLAHAN EXPIRES WHILE EATING HIS DINNER

At the Central Hotel Yesterday—He Was in the Act of Taking a Drink of Milk When Death Struck Him.

Died at the dinner table.

There was a mysterious and sudden death at the Central hotel, on Decatur street, yesterday about 1 o'clock.

J. R. Callahan, a white man, fell over dead while sitting at the dinner table in the common dining room of the hotel.

Heart disease, aggravated by the use of intoxicating liquors and other drugs, is supposed to have caused his sudden death.

Callahan was a stranger in Atlanta. That is, he was only known slightly as a traveling salesman, having been here several years ago as the representative of a carriage and wagon manufactory.

What business he was engaged in recently, previous to his death, is not known. He had not been to Atlanta very frequently of late.

Yesterday about 1 o'clock, a little after that hour, perhaps, Callahan walked up the stairs leading to the office of the Central hotel, which occupies the second floor of the building, on Decatur street, next to the corner of Ivy, and without entering the office or placing his name on the register, passed into the dining room.

He carried with him a small hand valise. This he deposited in the hall with his hat before going into the dining room.

The patrons of the Central hotel are mostly working people who eat a hurried meal at 12 o'clock. They had all had their dinner when the stranger entered the dining room, the only occupants of which were two negro waiters who were engaged in clearing up the tables.

Callahan took a seat at a table next to the wall—on the inside of this table with his back only a few inches from the partition.

John Williams, the waiter who took the order, stated that the man acted strangely in giving his directions. He had evidently been drinking some, but his demeanor was not altogether that of a man under the influence of whiskey alone. Later developments showed that it might have been possible that he was suffering from the effects of a drug, a bottle of whisky partly emptied found in his pocket having the appearance of having been adulterated to a decided degree.

While the waiter was busied in getting ready his meal Callahan sat almost motionless at the table, leaning a little forward in his chair with his elbows upon the table, and his head resting between his two hands—the attitude of a man in low spirits or suffering from bodily pain.

The waiter returned with the steaming victuals and set them before the guest, but without essaying to taste them he motioned the waiter to set them aside, at the same time asking for a glass of buttermilk.

The waiter hurried off for the buttermilk, and returning set it before the guest and retired to another part of the dining room, where he resumed his task of clearing up, the work he was engaged in when Mr. Callahan entered.

Naturally the waiter glanced back, and as he did so, he saw the guest in the act of raising the glass of buttermilk to his lips.

The man took [illegible] and the glass fell to the table cover, still grasped in [illegible] fingers. His head turned a little to one [illegible] resting against the wall.

He made no outcry, and the waiter not suspecting that he was in the presence of death, went on about his work. He had noticed the man's hand holding the half filled glass of milk fall limpid to the table, and also noticed his head as it fell slightly backward, but in connection with the man's unusual action when he entered and during the preparation of his dinner, he thought nothing strange of it.

Finally all was cleared away, and the waiter approached the table at which the late guest was sitting. He observed that he was still in the same attitude in which he had seen him last. This startled the waiter somewhat, but thinking that the man was probably asleep he went close up to him and caught hold of his arm, this action placing him where he could look into the wide open staring eyes of the dead man.

The waiter gave the alarm, and in a few minutes the house was aroused, and a hasty examination proved that the man was stone dead, and medical assistance was useless.

After a while he was carried to Patterson's undertaking establishment, where Judge Landrum empaneled a jury and proceeded to examine the dead man's effects and hold an inquest upon the remains.

His satchel was filled with papers and other goods. A telegram was found stating that $8 had been sent him from Charlotte with which to return to his home on. The telegram was dated the 24th of September, and it is probable that Callahan was on his way home when death overtook him. Another paper, a receipt, showed that he had left the $8 mentioned with a Mr. Albright for safekeeping.

The coroner's jury found that Callahan came to his death by heart disease, superinduced by the use of alcoholic liquors.

A bottle of liquor was found in his pocket, which had the appearance of containing a drug. Several drinks had been taken out of the bottle.

The body is still at the undertaker's. It will most probably be sent to his friends at Charlotte today.

FIELD DAY POSTPONED.—Owing to the inclement weather, and the bad condition of the track and field, the athletic games will not be played at Piedmont park this afternoon. The field day of the Young Men's Christian Association has been thus postponed until Thursday, October 2d. The same programme and prizes will be held for that day.

COLONEL LAMAR HERE.—Colonel Henry J. Lamar, of Macon, is spending several days in the city with Dr. and Mrs. Rankin, on Capitol avenue. These cut-glass decanters were purchased by Dr. Fox's grandfather, who was also named Amos Fox, at General Washington's sale. They were carried by him to Kentucky, and were presented by Dr. Fox's father, who was also named Amos Fox, forty-five years ago, to the church at Wakefield, Ky., for communion service. Mr. Duncan, knowing the history of the decanters, gave the church an elegant silver service, and will send the old decanters to his uncle as an heirloom.

GOVERNOR GORDON MAKES REPLY

TO THE CARD OF DR. MACUNE.

The Reasons Why the Name Was Withdrawn.

DR. MACUNE AND THE ALLIANCE.

A Favorable Report from the Arkansas Committee Secured.

SOME VERY INTERESTING READING.

ON THE TRAIN, September 25.—[Special.]—Governor Gordon was seen on the train by a representative of THE CONSTITUTION last evening and interviewed as follows during the stop at Macon:

"Do you intend to reply to Dr. Macune's card in this morning's CONSTITUTION?"-]

"No; I will let Mr. Forbes, who knows all about the matter, do that."

"Have you secured the capital for the cotton-seed oil enterprise?"

"No, not a dollar. We are not ready for that. I shall give my attention to it when I have more time."

"Where do you propose to raise the capital?"

"In Europe, and in this country also. We have propositions before us for a French company which are very tempting, but, as I said, we are not entirely ready. I shall make the whole programme up at an early day."

"What advantage do you claim over the old process?"

"We get a great deal more oil at a less cost, and a far better oil. By Professor H. C. White's analysis we get a meal with at least 10 per cent more than the meal of the old process. Why, we can take the meal of the present mills, after they have taken from it every ounce of oil they can extract, and get from eighteen to twenty gallons, and, perhaps more, from a ton of meal."

"Do you extract the oil by improved presses?"

"No; we do not use presses at all. We dispense with all that machinery and power. We simply use solvents, which are injected into the meal, and the oil flows from it into another tank, and without a ton of pressure."

"Is the process new?"

"Comparatively new. It is, so far as cotton-seed oil is concerned; but it has been in use for some years in extracting oil from flax seed, etc., and has been fully tested in cotton seed. It is the invention and discovery of Mr. Evans, of Cleveland, O., where the process is in use on a great scale."

"You think, then, it will be a success."

"Yes, I cannot doubt it, but I prefer to give the opinion of Mr. Strenby, who has consented to act as a director, and who is one of the foremost experts in cotton-seed oil mills in this country. He says it will simply revolutionize the oil business."

THE USE OF COLONEL POLK'S NAME.

"What about the use of Colonel Polk's name as director and vice president?"

"I prefer that Colonel Polk's letter answer that question. I shall give his letter to Mr. Forbes, and several other documents, which will make interesting reading. Colonel Polk is a gentleman of high character, I think, and I am sure he has forgotten."

"What about Dr. Macune's name?"

"Dr. Macune's duplicity in this, as in other matters affecting southern interests, will very fully appear when the facts are made known."

"Did he authorize the use of his name?"

"Of course he did, and then asked that the name of another prominent allianceman be substituted instead of his own. Dr. Macune's peculiarities will appear when I tell you as I do, that he asked to have another name substituted in order that he might, as he assured me, help the cause more effectively by urging through the columns of his paper, The Economist, that the alliance take hold of it and make it an alliance movement. He not only did this, but had the Arkansas State Alliance to appoint a committee, and the committee made a favorable report, which Dr. Macune brought me and handed to me at the very time when he asked that another name be substituted in order that he might more effectively serve the cause through his alliance journal."

"Is the movement to be taken up by the alliance?"

"I do not know; I hope so. I have talked to only a few leading members of the order, Mr. Northen among them, and only to him a year or two ago. He and they were much impressed with it. If I have used any name without authority, it is Mr. Northen's; but the fact is, the circular was printed only for conference with parties about the organization and to save writing long letters; and the names were inserted, not for publication at all, but simply for interchange of views with all the parties concerned. I rather think, on reflection, that Mr. Northen did express a willingness to serve, although this was a year or two ago, and before the process was secured, and when we were trying to secure it."

"You have it now for the whole south?"

"Yes, for the whole world, in extracting oil from cotton seed; but the capitalization will have to be greatly increased, I presume. In a few years, if it is such a success as experts think it, the capital will have to be very much larger."

"Do you wish to say anything about Dr. Macune's statement that you attacked him because he withdrew his name?"

"Nothing, except that it will be seen, in the first place, as I told you, he never withdrew except to more effectually work for the enterprise. In the next place, the change occurred in July, and I never assailed Dr. Macune until a few days ago, and would never have assailed him then, as my words in the speech I made show, but for his unpardonable assault upon me in his paper, and his wholly unjust misrepresentation about my attitude towards the alliance. The truth about it is, a more unwarranted attack was never made by any man than Dr. Macune made upon me. I was amazed at it, and my indignation was very great. I had never known anything about Macune. I had supposed him to be a true friend of the south and a gentleman of character when I asked him to become connected with this enterprise, as the whole purpose was to compete in the interest of our farmers, with the monopoly of the great cotton-oil trust, and no man, as I supposed, had ever entered into an enterprise with more zest than he appeared to do in this. When, therefore, I found in his paper a series of utter misrepresentations of myself, and when I discovered the plot which had been made to defeat me by misrepresentation, I denounced him and the programme very earnestly. Had I known Dr. Macune then as I know him now, he would never have had the opportunity of becoming associated with any enterprise I was connected with.

"I had expected, because I thought I was entitled to it, the support of every leader of the alliance in my race, and I could not permit, without denouncing it, this effort to place me in antagonism with the alliance and to create the impression on the alliance that I was the agent of the money power. It was so false and so absolutely the reverse of the truth that I felt justified in making the denunciation I did. Everybody knows this was the reason of my denunciation of Dr. Macune, and he knows it as well as anyone else."

"What about the $5,000 of stock?"

"It was to be given to the directors in lieu of salary for the work of organization in the states. Men cannot be expected to work without compensation, and this was their compensation, and they were expected to give a great deal of time to the work." W. G. C.

GENERAL GORDON IN HELENA.

He Delivers an Eloquent Speech to the Alliancemen.

HELENA, Ga., September 25.—[Special.]- A great crowd gathered here today in spite of the murky and threatening weather, to attend the barbecue and the ceremonies attending the presentation of the new brick warehouse, 80x100 feet, which the Americus Investment Company tenders to the alliancemen of the three counties which corner at Helena, the junction of the Savannah, Americus and Montgomery and East Tennessee roads.

It was a mixed crowd of men and women from all the surrounding counties, with here and there a yellow or white ribbon to show that the wearer was a member of the alliance.

The men strolled about and talked, and the women stood patiently with little children tugging at their skirts until the hour of 11, when Governor Gordon began his speech. For an hour and a quarter longer they stood in the open air and listened while the governor discussed finance. They listened respectfully to what he had to say about finance, and when he began to come down on the money power, they frequently interrupted him with applause.

The governor was beseiged by callers at the hotel, and at the barbecue he was shaking hands so much that it was with difficulty that he got through dinner.

The Americus party came with a presentation orator, but their train did not arrive till Governor Gordon was about to take the train for Atlanta. Colonel Langston and Colonel Northen had been invited but did not come.

The Governor's Speech.

Governor Gordon began by congratulating the alliancemen of Telfair, Wilcox and Montgomery upon the tender of the warehouse to them by the Americus Construction Company, which built the Savannah, Americus and Montgomery railroad. Having done this he proceeded to discuss the financial policy of the government, suggesting reforms which would give the people a stable and abundant currency. Following this he suggested a plan to enable the farmers of the south to get such advances on their cotton as would enable them to hold it for fair prices.

"Why, my countrymen," said the governor, "is it any wonder that the agricultural people of this country are organized? Even then, more than fifteen years ago, the man who now addresses you, predicted that the agricultural people would organize, unite in a great brotherhood, and be knocking at the doors of congress, and instead of appealing to them for relief, would demand it. [Applause.]

"Eighteen years ago, as a life member of the agricultural society," said he, "I stood in the city of Griffin and pleaded with the farmers to organize into a compact, solid brotherhood, that we might the better resist the encroachments of the money power. At last it has come.

An Income Tax.

"Another way to get relief," said he, "is through an income tax. I would put a tax upon incomes of $10,000, and largely increase upon $20,000, make it still higher upon $40,000, and higher still upon $60,000, and increasing in geometrical ratio until these enormous sums could not be accumulated.

I would raise the tax until labor, enterprise, and industry would be freed from the excessive burdens which weigh them down—until it was absolutely impossible for one man in this republic to accumulate enough money to buy all the farms of Georgia. They pay less tax than is just and requisite. With this gigantic means protected by the great power of this government, it has been for twenty-five years run in their interest, instead of in yours.

"My countrymen, these are not welcome doctrines for the money power of this country; but I am thankful that the day has at last come when we are banded together in a brotherhood that can make itself heard, not only in the halls of congress, but from one end of the continent to the other." [Applause.]

This ended the discussion of the financial policy of the government, and the governor devoted the rest of his speech to explaining his plans to enable the farmers to hold their cotton for satisfactory prices. He suggests the storing of cotton in alliance warehouses all over the south at convenient places, these to be insured and the owner to receive certificates from these warehouse companies to the amount of 80 per cent of the cotton's value. These certificates would serve as collateral, and upon them the owner of the cotton could borrow money in any bank. Or if desired the certificates of the whole crop, about $300,000,000 in amount, could be negotiated in England and the money could be had on them at a reasonable rate of interest. The result would be that in a few months the mills at Manchester and everywhere would be in need of cotton, the world would be demanding what the farmers had to sell and they would get better prices. The cotton in the meantime would be in the hands of alliancemen—their own brethren—and would it not be better to have it there than in the hands of government employes? They would pay the interest, it was true, but would escape all the complications of dealing with the government. There were 333 members in the house of representatives and only one for the sub treasury bill, eighty-four in the senate and not one for the subtreasury bill. If the alliance in every district where they were organized succeeded in electing a congressman, pledged to the bill, they would still lack a great deal of having a majority of congress.

In conclusion, the governor asked how the alliance could effect the reforms it aimed at if it limited itself to one measure upon which all of the brethren could not agree, which dissension was being created in the brotherhood itself. And he urged harmony in alliance ranks and the adoption of a policy on which all the friends of reform could unite. W. G. C.

DIED AT DINNER.

J. R. CALLAHAN EXPIRES WHILE EATING HIS DINNER

At the Central Hotel Yesterday—He Was in the Act of Taking a Drink of Milk When Death Struck Him.

Died at the dinner table.

There was a mysterious and sudden death at the Central hotel, on Decatur street, yesterday about 1 o'clock.

J. R. Callahan, a white man, fell over dead while sitting at the dinner table in the common dining room of the hotel.

Heart disease, aggravated by the use of intoxicating liquors and other drugs, is supposed to have caused his sudden death.

Callahan was a stranger in Atlanta. That is, he was only known slightly as a traveling salesman, having been here several years ago as the representative of a carriage and wagon manufactory.

What business he was engaged in recently, previous to his death, is not known. He had not been to Atlanta very frequently of late.

Yesterday about 1 o'clock, a little after that hour, perhaps, Callahan walked up the stairs leading to the office of the Central hotel, which occupies the second floor of the building, on Decatur street, next to the corner of Ivy, and without entering the office or placing his name on the register, passed into the dining room.

He carried with him a small hand valise. This he deposited in the hall with his hat before going into the dining room.

The patrons of the Central hotel are mostly working people who eat a hurried meal at 12 o'clock. They had all had their dinner when the stranger entered the dining room, the only occupants of which were two negro waiters who were engaged in clearing up the tables.

Callahan took a seat at a table next to the wall—on the inside of this table with his back only a few inches from the partition.

John Williams, the waiter who took the order, stated that the man acted strangely in giving his directions. He had evidently been drinking some, but his demeanor was not altogether that of a man under the influence of whiskey alone. Later developments showed that it might have been possible that he was suffering from the effects of a drug, a bottle of whisky partly emptied found in his pocket having the appearance of having been adulterated to a decided degree.

While the waiter was busied in getting ready his meal Callahan sat almost motionless at the table, leaning a little forward in his chair with his elbows upon the table, and his head resting between his two hands—the attitude of a man in low spirits or suffering from bodily pain.

The waiter returned with the steaming victuals and set them before the guest, but without essaying to taste them he motioned the waiter to set them aside, at the same time asking for a glass of buttermilk.

The waiter hurried off for the buttermilk, and returning set it before the guest and retired to another part of the dining room, where he resumed his task of clearing up, the work he was engaged in when Mr. Callahan entered.

Naturally the waiter glanced back, and as he did so, he saw the guest in the act of raising the glass of buttermilk to his lips.

The man took a sip, and the glass fell to the table cover, still grasped in his clenched fingers. His head turned a little to one side, resting against the wall.

He made no outcry, and the waiter not suspecting that he was in the presence of death, went on about his work. He had noticed the man's hand holding the half filled glass of milk fall limpid to the table, and also noticed his head as it fell slightly backward, but in connection with the man's unusual action when he entered and during the preparation of his dinner, he thought nothing strange of it.

Finally all was cleared away, and the waiter approached the table at which the late guest was sitting. He observed that he was still in the same attitude in which he had seen him last. This startled the waiter somewhat, but thinking that the man was probably asleep he went close up to him and caught hold of his arm, this action placing him where he could look into the wide open staring eyes of the dead man.

The waiter gave the alarm, and in a few minutes the house was aroused, and a hasty examination proved that the man was stone dead, and medical assistance was useless.

After a while he was carried to Patterson's undertaking establishment, where Judge Landrum empaneled a jury and proceeded to examine the dead man's effects and hold an inquest upon the remains.

His satchel was filled with papers and other goods. A telegram was found stating that $8 had been sent him from Charlotte with which to return to his home on. The telegram was dated the 24th of September, and it is probable that Callahan was on his way home when death overtook him. Another paper, a receipt, showed that he had left the $8 mentioned with a Mr. Albright for safekeeping.

The coroner's jury found that Callahan came to his death by heart disease, superinduced by the use of alcoholic liquors.

A bottle of liquor was found in his pocket, which had the appearance of containing a drug. Several drinks had been taken out of the bottle.

The body is still at the undertaker's. It will most probably be sent to his friends at Charlotte today.

ABOUT THE PRIZE EGG PLANT.—It was Mrs. M. Harolson who raised the prize egg plant at Edgewood. Mrs. Harolson is a success as a florist and horticulturist.

DR. HAYGOOD CONVALESING.—Rev. F. M. Haygood is still sick at his home, 20 Georgia avenue. He is suffering with an attack of rigors, but is convalescing rapidly and hopes to be out soon.

BAPTIZED SUNDAY.—Last Sunday at the Church of the Immaculate Conception little Mary Ethel Jordan, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Scone Jordan, was baptized, Rev. Father Schadewell officiating.

NO MEETING TONIGHT.—The announcement that there will be a meeting in the interest of Mr. Todd at the courthouse tonight, is a mistake. There will be no meeting until Monday night next, when Mr. Todd's friends have arranged for a grand rally.

INVITED TO THE PRISON CONGRESS.—Rev. Frank Joseph, prison chaplain for both county and state prisons in Fulton county, has received a letter from the principal keeper of Michigan state prison at Jackson, Mich., to attend the meeting of the prison congress at that place, which occurs in a short while.

AN OMISSION.—In the report of the election of the officers of the Atlanta Turn-Verein, the name of Mr. John C. Bieser, financial secretary, was unintentionally omitted. Mr. Bieser is a young man well known in the city, and is one of the hardest working officers of the Turn-Verein.

FIELD DAY POSTPONED.—Owing to the inclement weather, and the bad condition of the track and field, the athletic games will not be played at Piedmont park this afternoon. The field day of the Young Men's Christian Association has been thus postponed until Thursday, October 2d. The same programme and prizes will be held for that day.

COLONEL LAMAR HERE.—Colonel Henry J. Lamar, of Macon, is spending several days in the city with Dr. and Mrs. Rankin, on Capitol avenue. Colonel Lamar spent most of the summer with Mrs. Rankin at Saratoga, and returns to Georgia very much improved in health. Colonel Lamar, though a citizen of Macon, has large interests in Atlanta, being president of the Lamar & Rankin Drug Company, and of the Swift Specific Company.

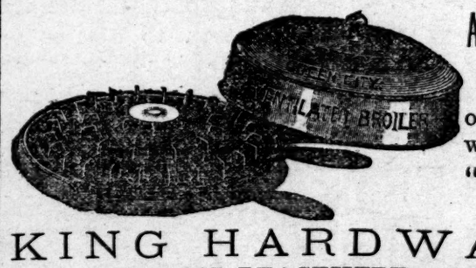

VISITING ATLANTA.—Dr. J. H. Spann, of New York, who has lately returned from attendance on the international medical convention at Berlin, Prussia, is visiting the family of his uncle, Judge Cunningham, of West End. Dr. Spann is a native southerner, belonging to one of our best families, and his friends will be gratified to learn that his health, which has been impaired by overwork, is so rapidly improving by rest that he will soon be able to resume his professional duties.

A VALUABLE PRESENT.—Dr. Amos Fox, of this city, has received notice from his nephew, Hon. W. M. Duncan, of Nashville, that he, Mr. Duncan, has purchased a pair of decanters, from a church in Kentucky, which have a history. These cut-glass decanters were purchased by Dr. Fox's grandfather, who was also named Amos Fox, at General Washington's sale. They were carried by him to Kentucky, and were presented by Dr. Fox's father, who was also named Amos Fox, forty-five years ago, to the church at Wakefield, Ky., for communion service. Mr. Duncan, knowing the history of the decanters, gave the church an elegant silver service, and will send the old decanters to his uncle as an heirloom.

THE STOCK MARKET.

The Day on the Floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

NEW YORK, September 25.—The stock market today was very quiet in the general list, but Sugar was extremely active again and brought the total trading up to the average of the past week. The tone of dealings, however, was not strong, except in the early morning, when small advances were scored in railroad stocks. The Bank of England this morning advanced its rate of discount from 4 to 5 per cent, and London as a rule was a seller to a moderate extent of its specialties, though foreign operations in the aggregate were not large, and had very little influence upon the course of prices in our market. In fact, the advance in the rate of discount was so fully expected and discounted that it did not even create a ripple on the general bullish feeling which had taken possession of traders, and first prices were generally from ⅛ to ⅜ per cent higher than last evening's final figures. The general opinion was that in view of the shape of affairs in the southwest, Gould was preparing to inaugurate an upward movement in his stocks, and the market being relieved of the incubus of pressure, so marked of late in Grangers and Villards, traders were encouraged to take the long side at least for a turn, and buying extended to almost everything in the railroad list, though the improvement was small in every case. Rumors from Washington were interpreted as unfavorable to the sugar interests, and there was a general selling movement inaugurated in Sugar Refineries stock, which swelled the business done in it to unusually large proportions, while its price yielded readily, dropping in all about 3 per cent. This quenched the bullish ardor of traders, and they took the bear side, where selling orders were discovered, with the result of wiping out the early gains in the railroad list in all except a few stocks, which were known to have special support. A more determined attack was made upon the list in the last hour, accompanied by reports of a large failure in Boston, and stocks in which that center is most interested furnished special objects of the drive. Atchison led off, followed by Union Pacific, and each of them yielded over 1 per cent. Under cover of this movement, however, there was good buying of Sugar Refineries, and it recovered about half of its early loss. Silver Certificates were again weak and dropped away to 112¼ on light transactions. The market closed active and weak at, or about, the the lowest prices of the day, notwithstanding a slight rally in the leading shares in the last few minutes' trading. Final changes are almost invariably losses of small fractions. Sales of listed 170,000 shares, unlisted 75,000.

Exchange quiet and steady at 481½@4.85½.

Hubbard, Price & Co.'s Circular.

NEW YORK, September 25—[Special]—The rainfall throughout the cotton belt east of the Mississippi for the 24 hours ending last evening was exceptionally heavy, the recorded precipitation at Atlanta, Memphis, Charleston and Augusta being respectively 1.07, 2.13, 0.48 and 0.63 inches. The damage that is reported to have resulted is no doubt great, and, though we think that perhaps it is somewhat exaggerated, its effect has been to alarm the shorts and create a sharp demand to cover contracts upon which prices have been advanced on an average of 12 points here, 14 points in New Orleans and 2@3-64d in Liverpool. The short interest is no doubt this evening much reduced; and, although the dispatches from the south are of a truly alarming character, they are not as yet fully credited, and are no likely to lead to any fresh buying for the long account unless they are substantially confirmed. Our cables from Liverpool are to the effect that spinners are pretty well under contract, and likely to buy freely on an advancing market. Port receipts today are lighter than last year, but the movement is naturally lighter in consequence of the bad weather, and is not regarded as an important factor at the moment.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Features of the Speculative Movement in Grain and Provisions.

CHICAGO, September 25—Wheat—The market, after displaying dullness, developed more life, and taken altogether a fair business was transacted. The indications were for a dull day, and, although the market opened ¼@½c higher than yesterday's closing, prices eased off ½c without any fluctuations of consequence, but some of the local traders commenced to buy at the decline, and as prices began to take an upward course the short interest took fright and covered fair quantities. A few of the larger floor traders bought moderately, evidently for the purpose of scaring some of the weaker shorts, believing the market to be pretty well oversold, and this action advanced prices 1⅛@1¼c, but the market was not any too strong, a degree of uncertainty being noticeable, and prices eased off ⅜c, again recovered and closed ¾@⅞c higher than the closing yesterday.

Corn—There was a fair trade at higher prices, a better feeling being prevalent. The better tone was due to a considerable extent to the Price Current's estimate of the crop at 156,500,000 bushels, or 584,000 bushels below last year, which is a little better than the government figures. The market opened with sales at yesterday's closing prics, ruled steady and closed with a gain of ¼@⅜c.

Oats were traded in fairly, but an unsettled feeling prevailed. Prices ranged lower early, but good buying by shorts produced a firmer feeling, and prices for May advanced ⅝c. On the bulge there was good selling of May, and prices yielded ½c, and the market closed steady at a slight advance over yesterday's close.

Mess pork—Moderate activity existed. Prices advanced 15@17½c, eased off 7½@10c and closed 12½@25c higher than yesterday.

Lard—There was fair activity and a net gain of 5c, as compared with yesterday's closing.

Short ribs attracted considerable attention. An improvement which amounted to 5@7½c was well maintained to the close.

NOTICE by the Mayor and General Council of the City of Atlanta of the holding of an election to determine the question whether bonds shall be issued by said city for the purpose of increasing the water supply of said city:

WHEREAS, THE MAYOR AND GENERAL Council of the city of Atlanta desire to issue two hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($250,000) of bonds of said city, for the purpose of increasing the water supply of said city, and the assent of the qualified voters of said city being necessary hereto:

Therefore, Be it ordained by the mayor and general council aforesaid, that in accordance with the constitution and laws of said state, and in pursuance of the amendment to the charter of said city authorizing the issue of said bonds, an election shall be held on the 14th day of October, 1890, to determine the question whether said water bonds shall be issued by said city, and that notice to the people (qualified voters of said city) be published in The Atlanta Constitution, the newspaper in which the sheriff's advertisements for said county are published, for the space of thirty days next preceding the day of said election, as provided by law, said bonds to bear interest at the rate of four (4) per centum per annum, and to run not exceeding thirty years from the date thereof, the interest to be paid semi-annually, on the first days of January and July of each year, and the principals of said bonds to be fully paid off within thirty years of the date of the issuance thereof.

If the issue of said water bonds is voted by the requisite two-thirds of the qualified voters of said city, then, and before the proposed debt is incurred, an ordinance or ordinances shall be passed providing for the sale and issue thereof, and making provision at the same time for the assessment and collection of the annual taxes sufficient in amount to pay the principal and interest of said debt within thirty years from the date of incurring said indebtedness.

But this shall not operate to increase the annual taxes on real estate or personal property beyond the charter rate of one and one-half (1½) per cent per annum.

At said election the voters shall have printed or written on their ballots, "For Water Bonds" or "Against Water Bonds."

Said election shall be held as municipal elections in this city are held, and conducted in like manner, and in accordance with Sections 50b I to 508 M inclusive, of the Code of the state of Georgia.

Approved September 5, 1890.
JOHN T. GLENN, Mayor.

I certify that the foregoing preamble and ordinance were adopted by the mayor and general council of the city of Atlanta on September 1, 1890, and concurred in by the aldermanic board of said city on September 4, 1890, and approved by the mayor of said city September 5, 1890.

ABOUT THE CAPITOL.

A NOTABLE INCREASE OF PROPERTY OWNED BY COLORED PEOPLE.

An Itemized Summary of Property in the State—Other Matters of Interest About the Statehouse.

One of the most notable features about this year's tax return is the increase of property owned by colored people.

The total this year in the state is $12,322,003.

Last year it was $10,415,330.

The absolute amount of increase may appear small at first sight, but all things considered, it is a remarkable showing. The percentage is the largest shown for any year since the negroes were freed.

Last year, too, the increase was large; and in fact the statistics for several years show a steady upward tendency.

The colored people are prospering.

Richmond county, it may be noted, returns more colored polls than any other county in the state—4,074.

In sharp contrast with this Fannin returns 8 colored polls, Towns county returns 9, and Gilmer 14.

A peculiar return is made from Taylor county. Of all the colored people there only one returns any merchandise, and the amount of his stock is exactly $1.

Here Is Increase.

For '89 the total amount of city and town property in Bryan county—one of the oldest counties in the state, too—was $10.

This year it is $2,860.

That's an increase of 28,500 per cent in one year.

MR. ALBERT'S FUNERAL.

Laid to Rest in Oakland Cemetery Yesterday.

The funeral of Mr. J. R. Albert occurred at Walker-street church yesterday at 2 o'clock.

The services were conducted by Rev. J. R. King, Rev. Dr. I. S. Hopkins and Rev. Mr. Sassnett.

There were a large number of friends present to join in paying a last respect.

Yesterday morning, Judge Marshall J. Clarke, out of respect to Mr. Albert's memory, adjourned court at 12:30 o'clock, for the day, and appointed a committee of ten members of the bar to act as an escort. They were: Messrs. H. H. Culberson, W. S. Thomas, T. P. Westmoreland, W. A. Haygood, W. R. Brown, John T. Pendleton, Hamilton Douglas, Porter King, N. R. Broyles and J. L. McWhorter.

The following members of the bar acted as pallbearers: Messrs. Henry Hillyer, J. R. Slaton, J. B. Stewart, Hooper Alexander, J. W. Austin and C. J. Simmons.

After the services at the church, the remains were taken to Oakland, escorted by the Comanche tribe of Red Men, of which he was junior sagamore, and Etowah league, of which he wast first lieutenant; and these orders concluded the ceremonies at the grave in accordance with their beautiful ritual.

A PITIFUL CASE.

An Eleven-Year-Old Boy with His Father Put in Jail.

Yesterday a man named Tribble, and his eleven-year-old boy, were arrested on an indictment by the grand jury.

Being a poor man, Tribble was unable to give bond, and he and his little boy were both put in jail.

The charge against them is misdemeanor, and grew out of a neighborhood brawl.

The boy was engaged in some malicious mischief in the way of rock throwing, and was instigated by his father.

The property of some of the neighbors was damaged, and they presented father and son to the grand jury, with evidence sufficient to secure a true bill.

And that was how the little boy came to occupy a cell in jail with his father.

It is rather a pitiful case.

THE WRONG SORT.

A Gentleman Gets His Blue Grass Fertilized and Foundered.

There is a gentleman living on South Pryor street who has all the fondness of a Kentuckian for blue grass. He is trying to make it grow in the front yard of his beautiful home, and has used various sorts of fertilizers without much visible effect.

Sometime ago a friend told him that cotton-seed meal was one of the finest fertilizers in the world for blue grass, and a liberal application would work wonders.

The gentleman decided to try it, and to that end went to a friend who is in the business and requested that he send a sack of cotton-seed meal to his residence.

Having to leave home he instructed his wife to have the meal put on the grass as soon as it arrived.

The friend who had the commission to purchase the fertilizer went up to a grain dealer, being a little absent minded, and asked if he had any cotton-seed meal.

"No, but we have some excellent stock-feed meal, will that answer?"

"Is it fresh and all right?"

"Oh, yes. Fresh carload just come in. It is sweet and nice enough for folks to eat, yet."

"All right. Send a sack out to No. — South Pryor street."

"We'll send it right away."

The sack arrived in due season and the lady of the house instructed the hired man to go to work and put it on the grass.

The work was neatly done, but imagine the consternation of the gentleman when he arrived at home, and discovered how his blue grass had been dosed!

THE VENABLE MEETING

Held Last Night at the Zouave Armory.

There was an enthusiastic meeting of the Venable campaign committee last night at the Zouave armory.

About 200 Venable supporters were present, and reports of the most flattering nature from all parts of the city and district were received.

Several enthusiastic speeches were made, which were received with tumultuous applause.

Tonight at 7:30 o'clock, there will be a grand rally of Mr. Venable's supporters at Woodward's hall, in Cooke district. Several speeches will be made. Hon. W. H. Venable himself will be present and address the meeting.

Mr. Charles D. Hill, Colonel E. M. Mitchell and others, will speak. A cordial invitation is extended to everybody to be present.

There will be a mass meeting at Miles hall, on Marietta street, Monday night, under the auspices of the Venable Fifth Ward Club.

The Venable central committee will meet Saturday night in the Zouave armory.

WHERE IS TERRY?

Nothing Has Been Heard from the Young Man.

Where is Terry?

It is a question which has been agitating those most interested for several days.

But the anxious inquiries have met with no response.

Since Terry left the office of Messrs. Parker & Smith, on Whitehall street, he has been lost to sight, although to memory he is still dear, in one sense of the word, at least.

He has relatives in or near Knoxville, Tenn., and it is presumed that he has been spending the lingering days of summer in their midst.

But that is a mere surmise, and his exact whereabouts are unknown to those most interested.

Merit wins, as the marvelous success of Hood's Sarsaparilla shows. It possesses true medicinal merit. Sold by all druggists.

Mr. Williford's Death.

Mr. Robert L. Williford, employed as a plumber at Paul & Gullatt's, died at his home, No. 69 Jones avenue, yesterday morning.

He had been ill for some days.

He leaves a wife and two children to mourn his loss.

He was a hard-working man, who had many friends in the city. The funeral will occur at Mapleton today.

For "hot weather" medicine Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled. It neutralizes the destressing effect of the heat, by giving tone an arength to the whole system, and creating and appetite.

Hoyt & Thorn's Prize Rebus.

Our prize rebus has been solved, and from the huge pile of letters from all over the country, as well as the city, we imagine that a great deal of fun as well as excitement has been extracted by those who tried to be prize-winner, or "bread-winner," as we suppose the fortunate lady will make bread of the prize. Hundreds came near solving it perfect, the only hitch being the omission of the word wood before tender by many, and the substitution of the word meats in sweetmeats for sweet but-r. Others had the name Henry W. Wellhouse for money well. But for these few errors nearly all were correct. The following is our printed solution of the rebus:

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Moneywell would tender their regards to their many friends, and in accordance with repeated inquiries would state that the excellent Teas, Coffee, Canned Fruit and Sweet Butter furnished at our party on Tuesday eve last, came from the firm whose card we enclose. A hearty greeting awaits all who trade at this Grocery Store, and all articles in the Grocery line you will find superior in quality, equal to any the market affords. Do not fail to keep the card, remember the address, and purchase your eatables of Hoyt & Thorn.

Only one perfect answer came, Mrs. Mary Hudson, 44 Church street, being the winner of one barrel of Hoyt & Thorn's Regal Patent Flour. The second prize, nearly perfect, being offered to the first young lady under eighteen years, was won by Miss Rosa E. Hibner, 12 Edgewood avenue. The third prize, offered to first boy under eighteen years, is awarded to Walter L. Fleishman—no address. If the hundreds who sent us answers had any pleasure in their efforts, we are glad of it. We hope during the coming winter months to offer other premiums for a solution of another rebus, then we hope all who were unsuccessful this time may be more fortunate next. In conclusion, we thank those who answered, and only hope that their error may be rectified by buying either the sweetmeats or sweet butter from Hoyt & Thorn and that they may have the cash-as-well as their bills well be received. Yours fraternally,

HOYT & THORN.

THE GREAT SALE

Will Continue Till the 30th—A Sweeping Reduction in Odd China and Bric-a-Brac.

Dobbs, Wey & Co.'s sale of odd china still continues and is increasing in volume daily, as the people learn of the excellent bargains that are offered, in good faith, at original cost. Everybody is satisfied, except some of our smaller competitors, who complain, because the crowd of purchasers flock to our store. This we cannot help, and to make it more interesting, we will offer our entire line of Art Pottery and Bric-a-Brac on the same terms, until the close of this month. This collection consists of choice specimens of "Royal Worcester," "Old Hall," "Doulton's," "Royal Dresden," and of other celebrated factories of Europe. These goods are all of new styles and patterns, as is the china we are now slaughtering. It is the natural result of our immense importing business, exceeding in volume that of all the firms n our line in the city combined, that we should have at the close of the season a great many odd sets and odd pieces, and to close these out in a hurry, we offer INDUCEMENTS in the way of LOW PRICES that MUST make them move.

We still have a large number of Dinner Sets, Chamber Sets, Tea Sets, odd dozens Plates, Cups, Saucers, fancy pieces of china, white and decorated, ALL GOING AT COST while they last.

We are determined to clean out the entire lot before our new stock, now coming over, will be placed on the shelves. Remember, this sale closes with this month, so come in time for your share of the bargains. DOBBS, WEY & CO.,

A MILLION CIGARS

RECEIVED IN ATLANTA.

CELEBRATED GRAND REPUBLIC BRAND.

They Came from New York and Will Be Sold by W. A. Russell, the Tobacconist—A Fine 5 Cent Cigar—A Great Firm.

A car loaded with nothing but Grand Republic Cigarros came into Atlanta this morning from New York.

The car contained one million cigars, and attracted universal attention on account of its being decorated and having on each side a sign on which were the words:

1,000,000
Grand Republic Cigarros
—Shipped by—
GEORGE P. LIES & CO.,
Manufacturers, of New York, by the Star Union Line, to W. A. Russell, of Atlanta.

This is the largest single shipment of cigars ever made into Atlanta, as the average order placed with northern factories amounts to not more than 20,000.

The popularity of this celebrated cigar, the smoker's favorite, has made it necessary for Mr. Russel to order this immense number in order to supply the rapidly growing demand for them, and yet he says the last one of the lot will be sold before Christmas.

The whole secret of the wonderful success of this cigar is that it was made of good material at first, and has since been made a little better each year instead of a little poorer.

For years the public has clamored for a first-class cigar that could be bought for five cents. Numerous brands have been made that were excellent at first but were allowed to fall off in quality, which, of course, killed what little popularity they might have gained at first.

Seven years ago, George Lies & Co., of New York, began making the "Grand Republic," using a long and pure Havana filler and enclosing it in a Sumatra wrapper.

The cigar took at once, and it has held its own better than any other brand that was ever put upon the market, and the reason is simple enough; they have been made each year just a little better they were the year before.

The enormous order just filled by them for Mr. Russell shows more conclusively than anything else that the demand for this splendid cigar is on the increase after it has already outlived hundreds of other inferior brands.

Mr. F. V. Simmonds, the general representative of Messrs. George P. Lies & Co., in the United States, is greatly flattered by the reception that has been given the Grand Republic in Atlanta. He makes a point to supply Mr. Russell with the very best cigars made at his factory.

Besides this magnificent cigar Mr. Simmonds has recently introduced a new 10-cent cigar, "El Fausto," made in Key West, at the factory of Lies & Co., from tobacco bought in Cuba by Mr. Lies himself, who spends most of the year there.

This large shipment of cigars will in a few days begin to find their way into the mouths of southern smokers, and their verdict will be that they are growing better and better.

If you wish a large fine lot or a strictly first-class home on this popular thoroughfare, which already rivals Peachtree in beauty, call at our office for further information. We can suit you.

$1,000 for high, level and shady Capitol avenue lot, 50x250 feet, to a 40-foot street, making two very fine lots. Easy terms.

$3,750 buys the best lot at Edgewood now on the market, 150x700 feet, on the corner of a 30-foot street; in the very best part of this delightful suburb and surrounded by attractive homes and good neighbors. The front is entirely covered with a heavy oak grove and is now in a beautiful lawn. Liberal terms.

DO YOU WANT A SUBURBAN INVESTMENT.

We wish to call your attention to an investment in a large tract of land on Howell's Mill road, which is offered at a low price for a few days only. It is right in the line of the many improvements already made and to be made between Atlanta and the river. It has a beautiful front of 3,000 feet on the road and lies well. Is just the right distance from the city at which to buy to get the best profit. Howell's Mill road has recently been changed from one of the roughest to the best road in Fulton county. Heavy cuts and fills have been made and the road splendidly paved. No objectionable features or surroundings. You can take this alone or a number of gentlemen can take it together. The price is far below what you can buy any other tract equally well situated, and the property is an unusually attractive one. It will pay you to call and get full particulars and inspect it. There is money to be made by acting promptly.

$1,500 will buy a tract of 500 acres of finest timber land in North Carolina. It is within 150 miles of Atlanta on the line of the Western North Carolina railroad, just ½ mile from railroad station. It is heavily timbered mountain land. A forest of the largest oak, hickory, poplar and chestnut timber to be found in the south. Is situated on the side of the mountain facing the railroad, and the timber is as accessible to the railroad as it is possible to be. On it there are hundreds of chestnut trees 100 feet high, and as straight as an arrow, and many poplar trees are twenty feet in circumference. The timber on the place will sell for twice the price of the tract, and the land is very rich mountain land and produces well. Lumbermen from New York and Boston are buying large tracts in this vicinity for the northern market, and cross-tie timber is in great demand. It is immediately in the mineral belt, and no doubt has valuable mineral properties. It is well watered. The price of $3 per acre for such land so convenient to the market at Atlanta is very low. Lumbermen will do well to investigate this. Will exchange for Atlanta property.

$10,500 for one of the most desirable homes on W. Peachtree street. It is a new 2-story 8-room house with all modern improvements, and is one of the most attractive homes in the city. Its location is unexcelled, and it is in every way a strictly first-class place. Lot 50x200 feet. Electric cars pass the door. Liberal terms. Call and examine the premises.

$1,500 per acre for beautiful Peachtree lot, 100x750 feet, with 30-foot street on the side. Part of the Dimmock-Reynolds tract, just this side the Belt railroad and opposite the English property. Easy terms.

$1,250 is what the choice Forest avenue lot, 50x150, can be bought for. It lies well, is in a splendid neighborhood that is already nicely built up with nice houses, has a ten-foot alley in the rear and is decidedly the best vacant lot on the north side for the money. Terms reasonable.

A GREAT LECTURE.

REV. SAM W. SMALL AT THE GUARD'S ARMORY TONIGHT.

To Be Delivered in the Interest of the W. C. T. U. for the Entertainment of the Delegates to the Convention.

Rev. Sam W. Small will be at the Gate City Guard armory tonight.

And he will deliver one of those splendid lectures which has made his name a household word throughout the country.

The lecture will be delivered in the interest of the ladies of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, to aid in raising funds for the entertainment of the delegates to the annual convention. Rev. Mr. Small will arrive in the city today, and the arrangements have been completed for his reception.

The Guard's armory is an elegant hall which will seat a very large audience.

The subject of the lecture has not been selected, but it will be in the interest of the temperance cause, and especially to the work of the Woman's Christian Temperence Union. No admission will be charged, but it will be given for the benefit of the ladies who are preparing to entertain the delegates to the convention of the National Christian Temperence Union, which meets in this city on November 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th and 18th, inclusive.

This organizations has unions all over the United States and Canada, and in fact all over the civilized world.

The national union numbers about 300,000. and there will be forty superintendents and 500 delegates of this order in the city during the convention.

This is the first time the convention ever met further south than Nashville.

It has proven a big task for the ladies to arrange for the proper entertainment of the visitors.

Such a body of prominent women has never assembled this far south before. They come from all parts of the country—north, east and west—and not a state or territory in the union will be unrepresented.

Few people have considered the magnitude of this convention, and for that reason the work of preparing for the reception has been all the harder.

But the ladies are at work.

And they are meeting with success, too, for their energy and preseverance in the cause, is indomitable.

YESTERDAY'S MEETING.

At 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon occurred the regular monthly meeting of the Atlanta union in the lecture room of Trinity church.

Quite a large number of ladies were present. The exercises were opened by the song, "Joy to the World," followed by a fervent prayer by Mrs. Witter.

After Scripture reading, Mrs. W. C. Sibley delivered one of the most earnest and eloquent talks ever made before the union in this city. She rehearsed the story of her change from a fashionable life to the work in which she has so long been engaged.

In speaking of scenes that she had witnessed in her native home—Augusta—she said that she had lived for a long while with the courthouse in front and the jail in the rear of her home. She had seen men beaten and heard the shrieks of women arrested by the police for drunkenness. And she remarked that these officers themselves walked in and took a drink when they pleased.

Seven out of the nine police commissioners in Augusta, she said, are liquor dealers, and the speaker referred to the strange paradox of men enforcing the punishment of the very criminals whom they had made drunk. She showed the enormity of the liquor traffic by statistics, and entered a strong plea in favor of carrying on the good work.

In conclusion, Mrs. Sibley said that she did not want to be misunderstood. She had no desire to see women take the lead in the affairs of the state, but her dearest wish was to see the men take the lead, press forward and push the good work to a successful end.

OTHER ADDRESSES.

Rev. Dr. J. W. Heidt was called upon and delivered a warm and earnest address in behalf of the ladies.

His speech was piquant, pithy and to the point. He spoke of the patriotic spirit of Atlanta, and spoke of the fact that an Atlanta man would always go down in his pocket when he was appealed to in behalf of the city. His words were full of encouragement, and he assured the ladies that he did not, for a moment, doubt that they would make a success of the work, "for God is with you, and God is in the majority."

Addresses were made by Miss Missouri Stokes, Mrs. Saulls and Mrs. Abbott, among the ladies.

Rev. Dr. J. W. Lee came forward with a short speech, saying that he would go to work in West End for the ladies of the union.

Rev. Mr. Sassnet said that he would do all that he could for the entertainment of the delegates and would preach a special sermon on temperance.

Rev. Dr. Thurkield assured the ladies that he would furnish at least fifteen homes.

Rev. Mr. Gavin promised his hearty cooperation in this work.

Rev. Mr. Bryant said that the way to get work out of a Methodist preacher wast just to tell him what to do.

Mr. Evans, editor of The Prohibitionist, said that he would go to work at once.

Rev. J. W. Heidt pledged himself to appoint a committee of gentlemen from his congregation to assist in the work.

I was very susceptible to colds. The least exposure would effect my throat and lungs. At last I found a safe guard in Smith's Tonic Syrup. It prevents my taking cold and also quickly cures me.—Henry Weldon, Savannah, Ga.

YOUR OWN LIFE.

May Be Saved if You Will Think of Yourself a Moment and Then Act.

Ulceration of the bowels, usually called "itching piles," is a very common affliction, and not causing much pain is usually considered of small importance, and the disease is allowed to develop into a very grave affliction. The symptoms of this trouble are moisture and itching around the anus, pain across the hips (low down), diarrhœa, and irregular bowels, pain in lower part of same, indigestion, and a long train of nervous symptoms, differing in nearly every case); and in the female, who are more liable to be affected than the male, many symptoms usually attributed to female diseases. This disease is a very fruitful cause of many diseases refusing to yield to the treatment of your physician, and places you on the list of "incurables." The results of neglecting this affliction are terrible to contemplate, a general impairment of health, frequently so slow as to be scarcely noticeable, derangement of the nervous system, unfitting you for business or enjoyment of pleasure, the development of cancer and stricture of bowels, or loss of power of controlling same when happily death intervenes and relieves the sufferer of his tortures. This is a terrible picture, but a true one. You may by neglect make this your own; can you take the risk when a cure is offered you? Treating rectal diseases exclusively for a number of years, I am able to offer you a cure without the usual pain attending the treatment employed by one who has not the experience in treating these diseases. The mode of treatment I employ for their cure is mild and is not unpleasant in anyway, as I use neither knife or caustic applications. I have cured many, and I am willing that they should tell you of my success if you wish it. I can furnish you their names if you prefer it. On my past success I am willing to stand or fall. Can I offer you anything fairer? If you wish to investigate what I have said, I extend to you an invitation to consult me, (free of cost,) and I will prove all I have said to the satisfaction of the most skeptical. DON'T GIVE UP

The use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. One bottle may not cure "right off" a complaint of years; persist until a cure is effected. As a general rule, improvement follows shortly after beginning the use of this medicine. With many people, the effect is immediately noticeable; but some constitutions are less susceptible to medicinal influences than others, and the curative process may, therefore, in such cases, be less prompt. Perseverance in using this remedy is sure of its reward at last. Sooner or later, the most stubborn blood diseases yield to

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For several years, in the spring months, I used to be troubled with a drowsy, tired feeling, and a dull pain in the small of my back, so bad, at times, as to prevent my being able to walk, the least sudden motion causing me severe distress. Frequently, boils and rashes would break out on various parts of the body. By the advice of friends and my family physician, I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla and continued it till the poison in my blood was thoroughly eradicated."—L. W. English, Montgomery City, Mo.

"My system was all run down; my skin rough and of yellowish hue. I tried various remedies, and while some of them gave me temporary relief, none of them did any permanent good. At last I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, continuing it exclusively for a considerable time, and am pleased to say that it completely

Cured Me.

I presume my liver was very much out of order, and the blood impure in consequence. I feel that I cannot too highly recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla to any one afflicted as I was."—Mrs. N. A. Smith, Glover, Vt.

"For years I suffered from scrofula and blood diseases. The doctors' prescriptions and several so-called blood-purifiers being of no avail, I was at last advised by a friend to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I did so, and now feel like a new man, being fully restored to health."—C. N. Frink, Decorah, Iowa.

FUZZLE: I say, old fellow, how do yer like me suit? bought it at Bang's misfit parlors. Great shape, isn't it?

MUZZLE. It's the most successful case of misfit I ever saw.

We are manufacturers and merchants. Our reputation for both would be obliterated if we either produced or offered bad-fitting clothing for sale.

The low motive of policy and personal pride, if no other, would prevent our presenting any but perfect merchandise to this community.

Professional men and clerks of quiet tastes will appreciate the popularity of our Black Cheviot Suits. The reason is—there's nothing like them for quiet dignity.

Clothiers, generally, didn't get awake to Black Cheviot till the demand disturbed them. They didn't anticipate the turn. Everybody's quantity was short. We made a great many, but, in the scarcity surrounding us, not enough.

The new shapes in Fall Hats---Dunlap, Youman, Miller, Knox, Spellman, Taylor---are ready---new blocks. You pay only for the style. Nothing for the name. You save $1 to $2 on a Hat, and these world-known leaders get the fame they covet as being "governors of Hat fashions."
